British in Greece Fighting Way to Sea; Reopen Coal Mines, President Demands

Asks Mines Reopen

President Roosevelt last night sharply called for reopening of the Nation's soft coal mines, closed three weeks by a wage dispute, in order that defense industries should no longer be handicapped by fuel shortages.

"Bituminous coal production must be resumed, and promptly," the President declared in a statement.

"The public interest demands it and the public interest is paramount," he said.

He called for a reopening of mines by Northern operators who already have reached an agreement with John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, the work to be carried out under terms of the new agreement.

And he told the union and the Southern operators, who have rejected the contract accepted by the Northern owners, that they should resume production in the Southern mines and reopen negotiations for a contract, provisions of which would be retroactive to the date of work resumption.

Coal for Defense Runs Short

The President's statement follows:

"While an agreement between a majority of operators and workers in the bituminous coal industry has been negotiated, there is still a disagreement, with the union and one group of operators on one side and another group of operators on the other. The result is that mines, which should be operating, are not doing so and there is a diminishing supply of soft coal available to plants engaged in defense production.

"It is imperative that there be no shortage now, or at any other time, of coal for defense production purposes. In order that the supply

Hayes to Manage D. C. Symphony

James Patrick Hayes, who came here three months ago as assistant manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, was elected manager of the symphony yesterday by its directors. He replaces C. C. Cappel, who resigned.

Hayes formerly was with the Civic Concert Service, Inc., a subsidiary of the National Broadcasting Co.

Plans for raising funds for this summer's concerts at the Watergate were discussed by the directors, headed by L. Corrin Strong. The concerts will be held this year, Strong said.

Should U. S. Give Britain Warships?

Last Sunday's Gallup Poll—one of five reports on public opinion in the war's new crisis—showed 67% opposed to sending some U. S. warships manned by American sailors to help the British. Do Americans think differently about turning over some U. S. warships to be manned by British sailors and to fly the British flag? See the Gallup Poll in Wednesday's Post.

Treasury Seeks 50% Increase In Income Tax, Higher Excises

By Robert C. Albright

The Treasury yesterday proposed a 50 per cent increase in the normal income tax rate with surtaxes starting after the first $2,000 of net income and bearing heavily on the middle brackets.

This was reliably indicated last night after the House Ways and Means Committee, over Republican protests, clamped a secrecy rule on tax recommendations submitted by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan.

Details of the proposed $3,600,000,000 tax plan reportedly barred further lowering of individual income tax exemptions but increased the levies on those presently taxed all along the line.

Raising of the normal individual rate from 4 to 6 per cent, abolition of the present 10 per cent earned income credit and retention of the existing 10 per cent defense tax would bolster the effective basic tax rate on individuals from 4.4 to 6.6 per cent, it was said.

Persons earning only slightly more that present exemption levels would find themselves taxed in some cases many times present small amounts paid, it was indicated.

Thus a childless couple earning $2,400 with no deductions and now paying $7.04 would pay $26.40 under the new plan. A $2,500 net income married pair now paying $11 would pay $33; a $2,800 couple now taxed $22.88 would pay $52.80, and a married person with a $3,000 salary now assessed $30.80 would pay $66.

A single individual with $1,200 net income now taxed $12.32 would pay $26.40. With $1,500 net income,

Mackenzie King Tells of Impending Trip to Ottawa

By International News Service

Ottawa, April 21.—"The declaration of Hyde Park was North America's answer to Hitler's birthday celebration," Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared tonight as he announced that President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt have promised to visit Ottawa early next month.

The prime minister referred to the joint statement issued by the President and himself at Hyde Park, N. Y., last night that Canada and the United States would exchange war materials and coordinate their defense effort to speed hemisphere defense and aid to embattled Britain.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt plan to arrive between May 10 and 15, he said, and will be the guests of the Governor General and the

Roosevelt Praises Capital As It Receives Safety Award

President Roosevelt, Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, and the country's leading traffic safety experts last night joined in a tribute to Washington's 1940 accident-prevention record and in urging that steps be taken to establish the Nation's Capital as the permanent safety capital of America.

The high praise was expressed at the Mayflower Hotel, where the National Traffic Safety Council presented the District with a plaque commemorating Washington's record for last year, when it became the safest city of more than 500,000 population. Six other cities and four States also were honored.

In a letter to the Commissioners read by Commissioner John Russell Young, President Roosevelt said:

"This is an honor greatly to be desired and the fact that it comes to the District of Columbia bears eloquent witness to the splendid effort which the Commissioners, in cooperation with the citizens, have put forward.

"The loss of human life through traffic accidents throughout the length and breadth of the land is truly appalling and every movement to promote safety in our streets and highways deserves highest commendation.

"Inspired by this splendid recognition I trust the District Commissioners will continue their leadership in the good work of making the National Capital a model city, worthy of emulation by commu-

Nearly 1,000 men from the Twenty-ninth Division beat off a brush fire that threatened Camp Meade yesterday as firemen throughout Maryland and Virginia fought to keep under control forest and field blazes that swept over some 42,000 acres in the two States Sunday.

The fire near Camp Meade raged for two hours, but was confined to underbrush and dry leaves, the Associated Press reported. Sixty-five policemen were assigned to direct traffic on the roads between the camp and Annapolis while 100 Army trucks and other vehicles

The effort of the American Red Cross in this emergency was symbolized last night by the voices of 5,000 delegates to the society's annual convention whose voices rang out from Constitution Hall across the land by radio with these words:

Five 'Troop-Laden' British Transports Sunk, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 21.—Five fully loaded British transports totaling 23,000 tons were reported sunk today as they were leaving Grecian coastal waters, and press dispatches emphasized again the German claim that a British withdrawal from Greece was imminent.

The report of the sinkings was made by the official German news agency D. N. B. (Although the dispatch did not specify what the ships carried, the German radio in a broadcast heard by C. B. S. in New York said the transports were "laden with British troops.")

The German air force, blasting Allied shipping around the jagged Greek coast, was credited with sending the five vessels down as they were steaming for Crete from Evvoia, Aegean island separated from the Greek mainland by the narrow Atalante Channel.

D. N. B. also said two other ships totaling 5,000 tons were left listing sharply while two others aggregating 12,000 tons were severely damaged.

In addition, a large transport was declared sunk during a German air attack on a convoy attempting to leave Tobruk, Libya, where the German encirclement was said to be tightening around the British garrison.

News reports of recent days have been predicting a "Dunkerque" withdrawal of British forces from Greece, and in this connection D. N. B. pointed out that most of the vessels attacked were doing transport duty.

In the absence of any new high command reports, and the reluc-

Let Army Pass, Nazis Reported Asking Spain

Franco Declared Urged to Join Axis For Gibraltar Drive

By the United Press

Vichy, April 21.—Adolf Hitler was reported tonight to have sent an emissary to Spain with an urgent request that Generalissimo Francisco Franco join the Axis alliance and allow from 50,000 to 90,000 German troops to move across Spain for an attack upon Gibraltar.

The message was said unofficially here to have been delivered to Franco by Rudolf Hess, deputy leader of the Nazi Party who flew to Madrid a few days ago and remained there 12 hours.

The attack on Gibraltar, according to the reports here, would be unleashed simultaneously with a German-Italian drive across Egypt toward Alexandria and the Suez Canal in a huge effort to wrest control of both ends of the Mediter-

Marine Union Expels Two For Communist Activity

By the Associated Press

Camden, N. J., April 21.—The C. I. O. Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America announced today the expulsion for "Communist activities" of two officers of the shipyard workers union at the Maryland Drydock Co., of Baltimore, Md.

John Green, international president of the union, said the two officers, Norman Edward Dorland, president of the Baltimore local, and Carl Bradley, business agent, were expelled by the C. I. O. union's general executive board yesterday

Green reported that charges against Dorland and Bradley included "reflecting the attitude of the Communist Party in criticizing national defense, the office of Production Management and the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee."

Officials of the union, which claims 70,000 members, termed the action the first of its kind in the history of the organization. Dorland and Bradley were recently reelected to office at Baltimore, where the union claims 3,000 members.

The union statement said the action was in accordance with the policy of the union, announced last January, that the board intended to expel "any member proven guilty of subverting the real purpose of the organization by using the privilege of membership as an effort for propagating or furthering the cause of communism, naziism or fascism."

Ships Wait for King

The following dispatch was sent by a correspondent of the Associated Press on his arrival in neutral Turkey after crossing the Aegean Sea from Greece. He was detached from the A. P.'s Athens bureau and sent to Turkey to report further developments as the Axis drive pressed down on Greece.

By Daniel DeLuce.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cesme, Turkey, April 21.—Against odds figured as worse than those at Dunkerque a British army of 50,000 to 80,000 men tonight was reported fighting a slow retreat to the southernmost embarkation point of Greece.

The heroic Greek infantry, with little or no chance to escape the country, is sacrificing itself to cover the British flank in an Allied disaster that has been inevitable since the third day of the German Balkan campaign, when a Nazi armored column smashed southward through Bitolj Gap.

Feats of legendary heroism by Greeks and British alike saved the allied forces on Mount Olympus from being cut off by German tanks fanning out over the plain of Thessaly.

Destroyers Ready for King

Two destroyers with steam up have been ordered to stand by since last Thursday night to carry King George II, the Greek royal family and government officials from Athens, which is opposite this Turkish port on the Aegean Sea.

The destroyers were ready to take the King and his government either to Crete or Egypt, but George postponed his departure when Premier Alexandros Korizis committed suicide.

Almost single-handed, the King carried on the government and the British government set the sailing of the destroyers back until Friday night.

Unless a long rear-guard action can be fought in central Greece and the Peloponnesus, it was feared that there was small chance for the escape of the Australian and New Zealand divisions and detachments of Britons and Scots.

A large amount of motorized equipment, guns, munitions and other stores must be considered as lost.

A wounded British pilot said Stuka bombers destroyed 17 British planes at a big air base in Larisa before the Germans captured that town. Fifty of the ground crew were killed.

Other Stukas were said to have fired 41 Yugoslav planes on Greek fields.

Nazis Made Cautious By 'Rough Handling'

By the Associated Press

Athens, April 21.—Greeks and British retiring from the northern mountain walls of Thessaly fought bitter-end delaying actions today with Nazi soldiers at last made cautious, a British communique said, by previous "rough handling."

The Greek high command said the retirement "to new positions of resistance has been fully successful."

[A United Press dispatch said the new Allied front, described as "shorter and easier to defend" was stretched across the mountains barely 100 miles north of Athens, it was announced officially.

[A government spokesman said a devastating assault by German dive-bombers had compelled the new withdrawal.

[But along the new defense line British and Greek troops were said to be inflicting a terrific toll of casualties on the German troops.

Recounting widespread Nazi air raids behind the fighting fronts, the spokesman said the regions of Athens and its port, Piraeus, were attacked "many times" yesterday.

Among the bombed areas listed by the spokesman were Preveza, Mesolongion, Agrinion, Atalante, Tanagra, Corfu, Kalamata, Thevai (Thebes), Megara and the ports of Yaltra and Zachaios. He said damage and casualties were not severe, however.

The British said 14 Nazi planes were shot down in a Sunday air battle over Athens, and two others were brought down elsewhere. They admitted seven of their own planes were lost.

Piraeus Bombed Repeatedly

The Greeks described the fight as a futile attempt by the Luftwaffe to cripple the R. A. F.'s Greek force. Athens itself was not bombed, although dive-bombers repeatedly attacked the Port of Piraeus, 5 miles away.

Two Greek hospital ships were bombed and one, the Hesperos, was sunk while anchored to take aboard wounded, the Greek Ministry of Marine announced.

The other, the Hellenis, although attacked near Patras by a large number of German planes which dropped bombs from low altitudes and opened machine-gun fire, reached a pier and disembarked her wounded, it said.

The British said their ground casualties were light.

"The enemy is advancing very cautiously, partly due to bad roads, but largely because of the rough handling he has received whenever in contact with our men," the British command said.

Greek determination to fight "to the very end," as expressed by King George, apparently was not affected.

Premier Hails U. S.

Emmanuel Tsouderos, elevated to the premiership today, declared the Greeks would keep right on "until the Balkans are cleared of those who led the infamous campaign against us."

"You may rest assured," he said in a speech, "that glory eventually will crown Greece. Greece will remain faithful to her commitments, and she is grateful to her great ally, Britain, who came here on her own initiative to fight. Behind us we also have the assistance of the United States, from whose great humanitarian principles mankind will benefit."

Tsouderos, an economist in public life for more than 20 years, was named premier to head the new cabinet formed as a result of the suicide last Friday of Premier Alexandros Korizis.

The overwhelming German assault which caused the general withdrawal from Mount Olympus, Trikkala and Larisa began to get results at dawn Friday, it was disclosed.

Then the panzers and regular troops who had been stalled by a Greek defense for nearly two weeks, boiled through at Grevena Pass, in the center of the Olympus line. They took the ruined city of Larisa and battered on as far as Karditsa, 14 miles south of Trikkala on the main road to Athens.

British armored troops rushed to plug the hole, but in vain. Australians and New Zealanders then were detailed to fight a rear guard action and were declared to have responded "brilliantly."

The British withdrawal was said to have been dictated by a determination not to be outflanked at any point—a maneuver executed by the Germans with telling effect in the Low Countries and France.

Athens in Siege, Nazis Say

New York, April 21 (AP).—The German radio heard here tonight by C. B. S. said a state of siege has been declared in Athens.

"After manifestations in the capital in favor of peace," the broadcast added, "some British diplomats fled from Athens to Egypt."

War Secretary Inspects 'Trackless Tank

SOMETHING NEW IN WAR MACHINES—Secretary Stimson inspects a new "trackless tank" at demonstration at Fort Myer, Va., yesterday attended by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and other ranking service chiefs. The new type 10-ton vehicle, built by the Trackless Tank Corporation of New York, is to be tested by the Army for reconnaissance use, possibly replacing scout cars. During initial, brief tests at Fort Knox, Ky., it made 45 miles an hour across rough country, with a 37-millimeter gun and two machine guns mounted in its turret; its designer says it can travel 85 miles an hour on level ground. It is powered by a 250 horsepower diesel engine, and carries ½-inch armor. Tentative plans of the Army call for a redesign of its superstructure for better arming of the tank

tance of authorized spokesmen to name any advances beyond Larisa and Metsovon Pass, reported captured yesterday, it was assumed that German land forces were meeting fierce resistance from the shortening Allied line.

Nevertheless, authorized sources were quoted by D. N. B. as saying that British divisions were in "full flight" and it was considered possible the high command was saving up reports for an impressive communique.

Admit Stiff Resistance

Austrian mounted troops were reported catching up with scattered British and Greek units in the defiles leading south from Mount Olympus. Many British were declared to have been taken prisoner in surprise attacks.

The pursuit of British units across the 60-mile Plain of Thessaly was said to be proceeding persistently, but the Germans credited the British rear guard with stubborn resistance.

Augmenting a high command report that the Germans had advanced "far beyond Larisa" and had poured through Metsovon, 40 miles northwest of captured Trikkala, D. N. B. said "German assault divisions know they dare grant the fleeing English no pause for breath."

"German troops in many cases got out of their trucks and panzers and have taken up the pursuit over tough terrain on foot," the agency added. "Many men have been so far forward that they have been without a warm meal or night's sleep for days."

D. N. B. also declared 11 British Hurricanes had been shot down in dogfights over Greece and "a large number" of British bombers had been destroyed in an attack on the Agrinion airdrome, about 100 miles northwest of Athens. No German planes were lost, it was stated.

(A British air force communique from Cairo said at least 16 German planes were shot down in battle in Greece, against seven British planes lost.)

The seizure of Petsovon Pass, coupled with reported Italian advances on Ioannina, 25 miles west of the pass, placed Greek troops attempting to retreat from Albania in grave peril.

Only one main route of withdrawal, a road running south from Ioannina, remained open to the Greeks, and that was menaced by the Nazi spearhead through Metsovon.

Reports from Rome said Italian forces seeking to encircle the Greeks in the Ioannina sector also threatened to cut off the line of retreat with a pincers movement.

The Greeks apparently were attempting to retreat toward Arta, which would be the left anchor of a shortened Allied line running eastward to the historic Thermopylae Pass near Lamia, 100 miles northwest of Athens.

Elsewhere in the Mediterranean theater, the Germans said their forces were holding their own. Tank-supported British thrusts at Salum, Egypt, and at Nazi forces outside Tobruk, Libya, were declared repulsed. Five British planes were reported shot down in this sector.

The Italian high command said at Rome that Axis forces had repulsed a British attempt to land reinforcements near Bardia, Libya, 10 miles from the Egyptian frontier. All troops which succeeded in getting ashore were captured, the communique said.

Athens (Tuesday) April 22 (INS).—German raiders yesterday bombed and sank the Greek hospital ship Hesperus off Missolonghi in the Gulf of Patras, the Athens radio said early today. The Ellenis was damaged and fires broke out on her deck, but the captain skillfully brought the vessel to port where the wounded were disembarked.

Axis and Satellites Reported Drafting New Balkan Map

By the United Press

Vienna, April 21 (Via Berlin)—Axis military and political leaders are drafting a new map of the Balkans at a conference in or near Vienna and will announce the new boundaries soon, perhaps within 10 days, it was understood tonight.

The new map, involving Yugoslavia and Greece and the satellite Axis nations bordering upon them, is reported being drawn by German and Italian leaders in consultation with representatives from Bulgaria, Hungary and the new "Free Croat" state of northern Yugoslavia.

Hitler's Hand in It

Map-maker No. 1 is Adolf Hitler, who is understood to have sketched the broad lines of the new Balkans in a conference "somewhere in the southeast" with King Boris of Bulgaria, whose visit to the Reichsfuehrere was revealed by the Germans today.

Also at the conference is Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, who is putting in Italy's claims to a part of Yugoslavia's territory four days after that country's collapse.

The new map would be known to history as "the Belvedere conference map of southeast Europe" and would replace the one which the Allies drew up after the World War when Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and modern states of Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria were set up.

The new map is believed to give Bulgaria portions of Macedonia which they once owned around Zaribrod, Pirot and Skoplje, and the Hungarians the Banat region north of Belgrade above the Danube.

Montenegro to Italy

Bulgaria and Italy, it was said, are expected to obtain enough of Yugoslavia to give them a common frontier along the Vardar River near Skoplje.

Italy also is expected to get a part of the Dalmatian Coast, including the former principality of Montenegro and perhaps a part of Slovenia unless that portion of Slovenia which is not annexed by Germaany herself becomes a protectorate similar to Slovakia and Bohemia-Moravia.

Serbia will be what is left of Yugoslavia after the division among Germany and Italy and their Axis partners but the manner in which the Serb areas will be administered has not been revealed.

Montenegro might be made an Italian protectorate, a part of the Italian empire, with King Victor Emmanuel as its king, similar to Slovenia as a German protectorate, it was stated.

Iraq Occupation Assailed

Berlin, April 21 (AP).—The German press, supported by the German foreign office, today raised a loud voice of protest at Britain's landing fo troops in Iraq, the oil-rich Near Eastern country which links Turkey and the Persian Gulf.

The action, coming as it did when Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, appears to be extraordinarily busy, was declared a breach of international law by an authorized spokesman at the foreign office.

When authorized sources were asked whether Hitler's dictum that he would strike the English wherever he meets them also applied to Iraq, they replied evasively that a certain Western statesman promised to aid Yugoslavia when there was no possibility of giving aid.

Iraq, they added, is some 1,250 miles away and Germany doesn't propose to make promises unless they could be kept.

Nazis Indicate They'll Take Over Rumania

By the United Press

Budapest (Tuesday), April 22.—Nazi quarters intimated early today that Adolf Hitler may reduce Rumania to the status of a German protectorate, much like Slovakia, to stamp out Rumanian internal troubles reported to be approaching civil war.

Semiofficial Hungarian sources accused Russia of inciting the terroristic Rumanian Iron Guard against Germany in an effort to create an excuse for a Soviet seizure of Rumania's Moldavian region.

Russian troops were rumored to have been mobilized on the Moldavian frontier, ready to march if the Rumanian government of Premier Antonescu falls because of the pressure being brought against it because of previous and present territorial demands of Hungary and Bulgaria.

Horia Sima May Take Over

Antonescu's regime was reported in imminent danger of collapse, and German quarters here said that he had become "a lone wolf" as result of a withdrawal of Hitler's support from the government of Rumania, already occupied by large German forces.

There were indications that Germany might move to replace the Antonescu regime either by taking over Rumania completely and making it a German protectorate or by placing in power Horia Sima, Iron Guard leader and former government official, who now is in exile in Germany.

Antonescu's position was reported here to have been greatly weakened by a letter written by Horia Sima from his German exile and appointing his chief deputy, Vassily Gascjinski, to act for him. The letter, it was said, was intended to warn Antonescu against going too far in his demands for a new frontier revision at the expense of Hungary, involving Transylvania. Hungary received half of Transylvania from Rumania under the Vienna Italo-German award of last August.

Food Situation Bad

Hungarian official quarters maintained last night that Hungary desires stability among all her neighbors, and the official foreign office organ, Budapest News, said that Hungary wants "no situation which could damage Rumania either in her economic production or her foreign relations."

The food situation in Rumania was reported very bad, and the Iron Guard was said to be exploiting it.

It was reported that German forces in Belgrade found documents showing that Antonescu had promised aid to the Yugoslav government and counseled the boy King Peter to "bide his time."

Cairo Awaits Big Nazi Push In North Africa

By the Associated Press

Cairo, April 21.—Repulsed in repeated assaults on the beleaguered port of Tobruk in Libya, Germany's North African army paused today to gather forces for another mighty effort as the British pounded its long supply line from the air.

The British welcomed the respite gained by the spectacular stand of the Tobruk garrison, as it gave their units in Ethiopia valuable time in which to mop up the remainder of the Italian divisions there and free themselves for transport to the Egyptian front.

South African forces operating on the Ethiopian front were said to have attacked Dessie, one of the three remaining Italian strongholds, while other forces were nearing Gimma Gondar, where the last of the Duke of Aosta's men are making a stand.

The Middle East communique said "satisfactory progress" was being made in all Ethiopian sectors, with British troops closely pursuing the enemy.

The only land action on the North African front was provided by British patrols operating near Salum, farthest point on the German advance into Egypt, with "nothing of importance" to report in the Tobruk sector.

British fighters and bombers continued their attacks on Axis transport and troop concentrations and a landing ground, the communique said.

"During the night of April 19-20 Derna, Bengasi and Ain el Gazala were heavily raided, but clouds prevented detailed assessment of the damage caused," the report said.

Three planes were claimed shot down and several others badly damaged in an attack Sunday on Malta. There were said to have been no damage or casualties on the island fortress.

Funds to Be Asked for London Hospitals During Bundles for Britain Drive

An appeal for Washingtonians to give funds for the aid of London volunteer hospitals will be made by the local branch of Bundles for Britain, Inc., on May 16, as part of a Nation-wide drive through more than 900 such branches.

A campaign in London for the same purpose will culminate on the same day, which is traditionally Hospitals' Day in England.

Posters showing wreckage hampering the already difficult tasks of these hospitals will be spread in show windows and stores in Washington on that day. Contribution boxes will be set up in numerous public places, and the local committee hopes for a harvest of small as well as large donations.

Mrs. William M. Smith, chairman of publicity and radio for the Washington branch, is serving as general chairman for the drive here. In announcing plans yesterday, she said that women's clubs, men's service clubs, as well as members of service clubs in Government departments will be asked to contribute.

A special message from Queen Elizabeth of England was released yesterday to signal the opening announcement of campaign plans. She said:

"The sincere interest with which I have followed the fortune of voluntary hospitals is stronger than ever at this time of their great trials and still greater achievements.

"Despite infinite difficulties and dangers, these hospitals have met the heavy calls made upon them in a manner that is beyond all praise. This has only been rendered possible by the generosity of the public. The remarkable result of the Hospitals Day collection is a tribute to all concerned; my warmest thanks and congratulations go to those who helped to make the 1940 collections so successful.

"As patron of Hospitals Day, I send my heartfelt good wishes for success in 1941. The claim of the sick and the distressed, who depend so much on voluntary hospitals will, I know, not be made in vain."

More than 45 nongovernment "volunteer" hospitals in London and the provinces already have been "adopted" by Bundles for Britain, and upward of $150,000 has been cabled since January to insure continuance of their vital services," the national headquarters of Bundles for Britain pointed out in a statement yesterday from its New York office. "In addition, thousands of surgical instruments, pieces of hospital apparatus and supplies have been sent abroad to replace similar equipment lost or destroyed by enemy bombs."

The participation of Bundles for Britain in the campaign "has the full approval of the United Hospital Fund and the New York Hospital Fund, both of whose directorates have commended the enterprise in letters over the signatures of their presidents," the statement from New York said.

Among key persons in the drive here will be Mrs. Arthur Carpenter, heading a committee for District hospitals, and Mrs. H. S. Middlemiss, head of the women's clubs committee. Other campaign leaders will be announced soon, Mrs. Smith said, at local headquarters, 1801 Connecticut Avenue.

Theatrical stars in Washington on the campaign day will be asked to join in the plans, but details of their participation have not yet been worked out, Mrs. Smith said.

Let Army Pass, Nazis Reported Asking Spain

personal message to Franco was said to have guaranteed in return:

1—To protect Spanish territory against any British attack or landing.

2—To guarantee the security of Tangiers opposite Gibraltar.

3—To provide Spain with enough foodstuffs to offset the crippling effect of the British blockade.

At the same time, an official French denial was made of reports that the Axis has requisitioned 53 French ships and the navy ministry asserted that "no ships have been requisitioned by anyone, at any time for any purpose since the French-German armistice."

Last June at the time of the collapse of France and in accordance with international law, it was explained, the Germans seized whatever French shipping it could in occupied ports and obtained considerable tonnage including the transatlantic liner De Grasse which is now serving the German army as a troop transport.

Meanwhile, the assassination in Paris of Jean Fontenoy, a leader of the Nazi-supported French party of popular assembly and confidante of Pierre Laval, was reported without confirmation tonight on the eve of proposed new French-German "collaboration" talks.

Fontenoy was one of the original backers of Laval's program of "collaboration."

Official French quarters said late tonight, in denying rumors abroad, that Germany has not made any demands of any kind upon unoccupied France regarding the movement of German troops southward to Spain in a thrust toward Gibraltar.

Declared Unnecessary

These official quarters pointed out that it would be absolutely unnecessary to ask French permission for such a movement inasmuch as the Germans already have a broad corridor down through France to the Spanish frontier along the Atlantic and Bay of Biscay coastline.

The Germans, it was said, could move any number of troops and mechanized forces directly down to Hendaye at the Spanish frontier from anywhere in occupied France and that actually the German high command with an estimated 60 divisions in France and Belgium has constantly been shifting its troops in the occupied zone during the last nine months without ever referring the matter to Vichy's attention.

Therefore, it was claimed, Hitler's personal envoy, Otto Abetz, who is returning to Paris from Berlin consultations, is not likely to confer with representatives of the Petain government regarding any moves affecting Spain and Gibraltar.

Guarantees Reported

Hess, who is reported to have flown to Madrid and conferred an hour with Franco before returning to report to Hitler, was believed to have exerted strong pressure on the Spanish leader to line up with the Axis alliance but it was not reported what answer from Franco he carried back to Berlin.

In asking for the right to send four or six German divisions across Spain to Gilbraltar, Hitler in his

Balkan Reverses Fail to Shake British

By the Associated Press

London, April 21.—Realistic Britons studied official announcements of continued Allied withdrawals before the Germans in Greece today and steeled themselves for more reverses—possible defeat in the Balkans.

"But, after all it does not mean we've lost the war—not by a long shot," was the typical comment among informed quarters who visualized increasing British power in Egypt.

They said they were encouraged by the fact that the Axis forces driving across North Africa had been stopped in the vicinity of Salum, Egyptian outpost near the Libyan border.

If they could have done so, these quarters said, the Germans and Italians would have sped on to Alexandria before Imperial troops would have had time to get back from Greece.

Concentrate on Egypt

It was reasonable to assume that the British command realized some days ago that the Greek situation might become very dangerous in the face of overpowering numbers of men and machines and already is concentrating its power to preserve Egypt and the Suez Canal life line.

Determination was expressed on all sides to devote every energy to holding Egypt and protecting the vital Middle East oil fields at all costs.

The landing of British troops in Iraq was seen as indication of the official belief that the battle is veering toward Suez and the Middle East.

Already there are faint grumblings about the wisdom of going into Greece, but there are no signs of a demand for an "inquest" such as followed the Allied withdrawal from Norway.

It was argued that Britain could not let the Greeks down, regardless of the military cost and, besides meeting the moral obligation of helping small nations, it was worth some sacrifice in men and equipment to hold up the German advance.

From Australia, however, came reverberations. Herbert Evatt, labor member of the Australian advisory war council, declared:

"It is unfortunate that early communiques suggested Anzacs in Greece were part of a fully equipped British army. Now it is known this was entirely misleading."

But at the same time Australia launched a recruiting drive for 50,000 additional men and enlistment offices were crowded with thousands of volunteers.

6 Nazis Who Fled Give Up in Mexico

Mexico City, April 21 (AP).—Six crew members of the seized German liner Orinoco who fled to sea from Tampico April 8 in a 30-foot yawl gave themselves up to immigration authorities today at Vera Cruz, 240 miles south of Tampico, the government information office reported.

At the time of their escape, German sources at Tampico said the men had built the boat during their internment in the port, had placed a month's supplies aboard and intended to sail to Germany or the United States. They also were reported to have taken navigation instruments from the Orinoco.

Visit Bombed Area

Belfast, April 21 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester paid a surprise airplane visit to northern Ireland today and saw first hand the damage done in recent Nazi bomb raids.

Nazis Batter British Coastal City for Hours

By the Associated Press

A Southwest Coastal Town, England (Tuesday), April 22.—Heavy casualties were feared here early today after this town had been battered by Nazi air attack for several hours.

The blitz bombing began when waves of German bombers arrived soon after dusk. Flares dropped by the first wave showed the way for others following with hundreds of incendiaries, oil bombs and high explosives.

Defenders of the town struggled under the rain of fire and death to save lives and property but it was believed that casualties would prove heavy.

There was a brief lull just before midnight, then the attack resumed with greater ferocity.

Again the roar of the raiders eased but for a third time, bombers swooped in from the sea with their loads of explosives before the all-clear finally sounded.

(A repeated target recently for heavy Nazi raids on Britain's southwest coast has been the English Channel port of Plymouth which again may have been singled out by the Luftwaffe for its town-a-night attacks.)

There was a brief alarm in London tonight.

On the offensive, the air ministry said British bombers had started large fires in Cologne in overnight raids Sunday, had bombed the German industrial city of Duesseldorf, the docks at Brest, on the Nazi-occupied French coast, oil stores at Rotterdam and the docks at Dunkerque and Ostend.

King Peter's Plane, Jerusalem Bound, Reported Attacked

London, April 21 (U.P.).—King Peter II of Yugoslavia narrowly escaped death when the plane flying him to the Holy Land was attacked by Axis warplanes, the Ankara radio reported tonight.

One unidentified Yugoslav cabinet minister aboard the King's plane was killed, it was said.

The King, accompanied by his anti-Axis premier, his war minister and several other ministers, will establish a government of "free Yugoslavia" in Jerusalem, it was understood. King Peter and Gen. Dusan T. Simovic, premier of Yugoslavia in its 12 days of struggle against the German blitzkrieg, were said to have arrived in Jerusalem along with several of their ministers.

14 Divisions of Greeks Caught in Trap, Italy Says

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 21.—Italian dispatches said that a "big battle to wipe out the Greek army" was in progress today along the Albanian frontier, with 14 divisions threatened at their back by the Germans and caught in a vice between the Italians and the Ionian Sea.

The Greeks were declared to be virtually helpless, party because of the clutter of their own impedimenta of war, which they now have to abandon on the clogged roads.

The greatest slaughter and destruction is taking place at the ruins of Perati Bridge, which spanned the Viosa River gorge at the Greek Albanian frontier, Il Popolo di Roma's correspondent reported.

Fascist dive-bombers were said to have blasted away the structure, trapping the Greek army on jammed roads. Waves of 500 bombing and machine-gunning planes and shell bursts from Italian artillery were declared working havoc among them.

The Italians there had thrust from the north and east, while to the west another column broke through the Greek defenses along the coast.

The high command said the entire Ionian coast of Albania was now in its possession, and Il Popolo's correspondent declared that it was only a question of holding the Greeks "tight in the pincers" between Perati and the coast.

Italians, afoot and on muleback, were said to be approaching the Kalamas River in their frontal assault. This stream is about 5 miles inside Greece at the coast. La Tribuna said German motorized columns were approaching from the other side of the stream.

The systematic dive-bombing of the rutted, twisting mountain roads was said to have left such a tangle of abandoned motor vehicles, artillery and supply trains that the Greeks no longer had room to move or fight.

Il Popolo's correspondent said the Greeks tried to take too much with them and delayed too long destroying gasoline, scattering surplus munitions, burning houses, killing livestock and dynamiting bridges.

As a result, he said, they lost an opportunity to establish a strong defense line on their own soil.

In East Africa, it was announced the Duke d'Aosta, commander of Italian forces, rejected a British demand for unconditional surrender of his troops in order to insure the protection of the Italian population.

The demand, Italian officials said, was made by Lieut. Gen. Alan Gordon Cunningham, British East African commander, who said in a note to d'Aosta that he could not assume the responsibility for the protection or succor of Italians outside the zone occupied by British troops unless the Italian forces laid down their arms.

D'Aosta, Italian officials said, replied that "I reject proposals of a military nature which you advanced, without giving them consideration," and notified Cunningham that "responsibility rests on you."

Repeated Axis air raids were made on Tobruk, 80 miles west of the Egyptian border, the high command said.

In the Mediterranean, it reported, Italian planes torpedoed and sank a 13,000-ton oil tanker and an 8,000-ton auxiliary cruiser out of an Allied convoy.

Windsor, N. C. (AP).—This witness probably gave an accurate account of the scene. Asked by Solicitor John R. Jenkins, jr., what happened after the first shot was fired in a shooting scrape, she replied simply:

"Why everyone started running."

Senate Inquiry In Meade Cost To Open Soon

Chairman Truman of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee announced yesterday that the group will open an exhaustive probe into reasons for the "excessvie cost" of the new Army cantonment at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

The investigation, tentatively scheduled to begin tomorrow morning, will go into all phases of the construction of the camp and be followed by similar inquiries of the building of other cantonments where the cost has greatly exceeded original estimates.

"There is no question but that the cost of building Fort Meade was excessive," Truman stated. "The principal reason for the excessive cost was the choice of the site and this will be carefully investigated. The War Department officials responsible will first be heard, followed by the contractors and labor leaders."

Officials from the department are expected to reply in detail before the committee to Congressional charges that "several million dollars" were wasted in the building of the nearby cantonment, due to the "incompetence and inefficiency" of the Army officers in charge.

Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, who made the charges, demanded that those responsible for the "waste" be court-martialed. Secretary of War Stimson then declined to answer Engel, declaring that the War Department would reply before the proper committee of Congress.

Troubles which occurred during the construction of the cantonment for Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia National Guardsmen and selectees, included a strike, vandalism and charges of excessive labor union initiation fees for working on the project.

Senator Truman said the committee will meet this morning to decide definitely when the probe will begin. An investigation into the construction of Camp Blanding, Fla., will follow the Fort Meade inquiry.

Green Attacks Compulsory Mediation Bill

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Strong opposition was voiced by the American Federation of Labor last night to the Vinson compulsory mediation bill, bringing organized labor into 100 per cent cooperation against the legislation.

William Green, A. F. L. president, in a letter to all members of the House, attacked the bill as "highly objectionable" and bound to create "hatred and enmity" among labor toward Congress and the Government.

Earlier Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, also opposed the measure, which may be brought before the House for a vote later in the week.

Blow to Defense Seen

Hillman, like Green and Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, contended the measure would slow up rather than speed defense production by increasing the number of labor disputes.

The OPM official told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee he did not believe the rights of labor would be materially "impaired" by the "cooling off" period provided in the bill, during which mediation would be attempted, but felt that such a move was inadvisable at this time. He opposed other features of the bill.

"Any legislation now indicating a lack of confidence in labor," Hillman declared, "will give aid and comfort to those opposing the Nation here and abroad."

Meanwhile in the House, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, an advocate of antistrike legislation, urged that Congress "strike the shackles which have been forced upon the Nation's defensive industry." Private ownership, he declared, "stands at the mercy of Government bureaucrats and union dictators."

Expects House Passage

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, sponsor of the compulsory mediation bill, said he would ask the House Rules Committee tomorrow for a rule bringing the measure before the House. He said he expected the House would pass the bill.

Hillman predicted that "we are going into an era of even greater collaboration between labor and capital" and urged such cooperation as the best means of keeping defense machinery going. He opposed any new labor legislation, but said he would favor Government operation of strike-bound plants "if it becomes necessary . . . and there is no other way."

Contending again and again under cross examination that confidence in the "good faith and cooperation" of labor is the "real guarantee" of defense production, Hillman declared that "labor knows what is at stake."

Would Hit Labor

"If something should happen in this country," he said, with apparent reference to a blow at democratic government, "within 24 hours all the gains of labor would be swept away. The rank and file realize this.

"We have got a spirit of full cooperation today. With cooperation we can out-build and out-do any totalitarian system built on coercion."

Henderson to Use Authority To Force Plant Expansion

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The newly created Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply will use its authority "to stimulate provision of the necessary supply materials and commodities required for civilian use" to force a large-scale program of plant expansion, it was learned yesterday.

OPACS officials admitted that they would use several powers granted them in the executive order creating the agency to provide extensive new production facilities, the construction of which, they believe, has not been sufficiently speedy or large enough for emergency demands.

Leon Henderson, OPACS administrator, is known to have insisted in defense councils that production facilities, particularly those for raw materials and metals already on the Army-Navy Munitions Board critical list, be enormously enlarged. His immediate staff have publicly demanded a larger plant and equipment expansion program, holding that modern mechanized warfare requires defense production from machine shops and steel mills greatly in excess of that presently scheduled.

Resistance Met

An expansion program of the scope Henderson advocated, however, has met with some resistance, partly from business groups concerned with the financial risk involved, and partly from other defense officials uncertain as to future requirements.

In his new position of authority, observers believe that Henderson can use his price fixing and supply "stimulation" powers as levers to obtain new plants.

For example, it was explained, Henderson might grant a price increase requested by a certain industry contingent on that industry's adoption of an expansion program to increase supply to a point where there will be no continued scarcity to force further price rises.

In addition, the new agency has authority to recommend steps to assure adequate supplies. These recommendations, made under a Presidential delegation of power, will carry added weight, it is believed, with other Government agencies having the funds to spend on new plants and equipment.

Points to Steel Action

Henderson, who is fond of quoting an estimate of Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, that scarcity in supply cost the Government an added $15,000,000 in its World War I effort, may also use his duty to hold down defense and civilian costs as an argument for insisting on new production facilities, it was said.

Meantime, Henderson acted yesterday to hold down prices of farm machinery by writing manufacturers for their "voluntary cooperation."

Although he admitted that wage increases have taken place in the industry and other costs have advanced, Henderson justified his request with an allusion to his recent order freezing the price of steel. He noted that there were "assured prices of the major raw material and a favorable demand in the industry generally."

Henderson asked that farm equipment manufacturers maintain the price schedules now in effect and asked for voluntary cooperation "in the hope, which I am sure we both share, that other steps may be avoided."

Contract Ends 17-Day Strike At Birdsboro Steel Foundry

Union leaders and company representatives of the Birdsboro Steel Foundry & Machine Co., Birdsboro, Pa., saved themselves a trip to Washington last night by settling a 17-day-old strike on which they were to meet today before the National Defense Mediation Board.

The board announced last night that it had called off the scheduled conferences on rumors of early peace and a few minutes later received word of the settlement, which took the form of a new contract, ratified by the striking C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee local.

The settlement was the tenth back-to-work agreement effected in the 16 cases certified to the board to date. In it the board's success was even one degree better than its ninth victory, when the company and union officials of the Minneapolis Moline Power Equipment Co. avoided a strike by settling their differences in a Washington hotel room on Saturday a few minutes before they were due to meet with a board panel.

In the Birdsboro case, however, the disputants reached agreement on home territory and saved the railroad fare.

The strike involved 1,209 workers, idle since April 4, when the SWOC struck over the question of the proper collective bargaining organization. The strike was certified April 17.

The company holds Army contracts with high priority ratings.

Meantime, the Labor Department yesterday certified to the board a second pre-strike dispute, which involved the Kellogg Switchboard & Supply Co., Chicago, where two A. F. of L. unions are threatening to strike. The board wired the disputants that it considered it "essential" that there be no stoppage and promised to set the case down for hearing some time this week.

The unions last night ordered a 24-hour delay in the strike call.

The unions involved, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the International Association of Machinists, were certified as bargaining agencies by the National Labor Relations Board in April, 1940. Since then, however, they have experienced difficulty in attempts to negotiate with the company. They struck June 28 and returned to work September 30. Despite a Labor Board order of January 2, 1941, instructing the company to bargain in good faith, the unions reported continued trouble and obtained the strike vote, to take effect today.

About 580 employes are involved. The company holds approximately $1,000,000 in orders for microphones and telephone equipment for the Army Signal Corps.

Let Time Fix Steel Prices, Weir Says

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 21.—Ernest T. Weir, head of the National Steel Corporation, which took the lead in granting a 10-cent hourly increase to steel workers, said today the industry should let "second quarter facts" decide whether a steel price rise would be necessary to meet higher production costs.

"It is my opinion that the industry should take the second quarter of 1941, when the higher costs will be effective and let the financial results demonstrate what its position is," Weir said at a general press interview and added:

"It won't hurt the industry to take three months to produce facts."

Leon Henderson, Government price administrator, on April 17 "froze" steel prices at first-quarter levels, but said the price schedule would be subject to later revision.

Agrees With Henderson

Weir, ruddy-faced chairman of the Nation's sixth largest steel producer, said he was in accord with Henderson if "I interpret his statements to mean that a waiting period will precede any action on steel prices."

"I would assume that the Government is not disposed to see the industry operate without a profit—nor to see any company put out of business because of higher costs," he added.

"There are no facts available today on which the industry, the Government or the public can determine the necessity of a price change now," he said. "The facts will be definite by mid-July, applicable to the industry, large and small."

He also explained his firm's position in granting the raise in wages as the U. S. Steel Corporation was negotiating with the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee on a new contract. U. S. Steel ultimately followed National's lead in granting the raise.

"It has been said that we acted because of a grudge against the corporation," Weir said. "There is nothing to that. National Steel does not handle its business on a grudge basis. No company could and remain in business long.

"Entitled to Raise

"We simply believed that our employes were entitled to a raise of nothing less than 10 cents an hour. There was an improvement in the industry and we felt the workers should share in it.

"I do not feel that the wage raise will result in wild inflation. The total amount involved as compared to the amount which the Government is spending in defense is insignificant."

While Weir considered the possibility of a coal wage raise in his expectations of better earnings, he saw "serious danger if the mine stoppage continues.

"In another week this situation will be serious," he said. "If coal deliveries are not resumed steel production is bound to be impaired."

A few minutes later, according to police, a station wagon, driven by Leonard Barber, of 468 H Street Southwest, crashed into two automobiles that had been involved in a minor collision at Lee Boulevard and Glebe Road, Arlington. Shipbuilders, Unions Sign No-Strike Pact

Seattle, Wash., April 21 (INS).—A "no-strike" pact covering all shipyards on the Pacific Coast was approved late today in Seattle at a conference of shipbuilders and representatives of the Coast Metal Trades Councils.

Council representatives of San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Los Angeles voted their approval in a referendum action.

The agreement covers both the master pact and zone pacts for the various shipbuilding centers of the coast, although a subcommittee was still in session tonight making minor adjustments.

Speedy approval of the plan, developed in San Francisco, had been sought by President Roosevelt.

"Cooling Off" Period Invoked

Detroit, April 21 (AP).—A 30-day "cooling off" period, required where strikes would affect the public interest, was invoked tonight by the Michigan Labor Mediation Board in the dispute between General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.).

The U. A. W.-C. I. O., which struck earlier in the month at the huge Ford Motor Co. plant in suburban Dearborn, filed a five-day notice of intent to strike against General Motors last Friday because of unsatisfactory progress in concluding a new union-corporation working contract.

The decision to invoke the 30-day period, a ruling the board has followed in mediating disputes in industries holding defense orders, was announced at Lansing after conferences between the three members of the board.

Previously, R. J. Thomas, U. A. W.-C. I. O. president, had said "we'll strike, if necessary." In the five-day strike notice the union said it did not intend to ask any workers needed for defense production to leave their jobs.

Thursday Deadline Set

Thursday midnight has been set as the deadline by Thomas for local unions to take strike votes which would authorize a walkout.

Meanwhile, conferences between the union and corporation were resumed today on "basic issues" with James F. Dewey, Federal labor conciliator, as mediator.

The union demands union shop recognition, wage increases, approval of a shop steward system, enlarged powers for the impartial umpire, and other concessions.

In Washington, Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner predicted today that mediation and a desire on the part of workers and employers to cooperate in the defense program would bring prompt settlement of labor disputes in the State.

The Governor insisted that his only formal business in the Capital was his call at the White House, where he reported to President Roosevelt on settlement of the Ford Motor Co. strike and on talk of the strike at General Motors plant.

C. I. O. Appeals to Miss Perkins

Buffalo, N. Y., April 21 (AP).—The C. I. O. appealed today to Secretary of Labor Perkins to intervene in a seven-day work stoppage which has tied up production of shells for Great Britain and the United States at the Buffalo plant of the American Car & Foundry Co.

"Your immediate action is urged in order that production of defense materials may be resumed and in order that the workers may be returned to their jobs," a telegram to the Labor Secretary asserted.

Nathan E. Cowan, subregional director of the C. I. O. Steel Workers' Organizing Committee and author of the message, requested Miss Perkins to advise the National Mediation Board of the situation.

Md. and Va. Milk Agency Must Pay $30,000 to District

Although none of the 1,150 members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association lives here, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that the group must pay the District about $30,000 in property and business privilege taxes.

The association, which handles about 87 per cent of Washington's milk, maintains offices here, but contended that it acted only as agents for the Maryland and Virginia farmers who produce the milk.

The court ruled, however, that the association came within the local tax laws and remanded the matter to the Board of Tax Appeals for computation of the amount owed.

The District's part in the forthcoming drive by the United Service Organizations for National Defense to raise $10,765,000 for religious, welfare and recreational facilities for members of the armed forces will be discussed today at a District Building meeting.

The Commissioners conferred briefly yesterday with Community Chest representatives and Welfare Director Robert Bundy, announcing at the conclusion that a meeting will be held at 11 a. m. today to consider ways and means of obtaining Washington's quota of the fund.

The conference will be attended by members of the Board of Trade, Junior Board of Commerce, Community Chest, Council of Social Agencies, the District Defense Council and the six groups comprising the United Service Organizations for National Defense.

The U. S. O., a nonprofit group established with Government sanction, plans to set up more than 300 service clubs at locations adjacent Army camps, naval bases and defense centers. Its membership includes the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Salvation Army, Jewish Welfare Board, National Catholic Community Service and the Travelers Aid Society.

The campaign is scheduled to begin June 3. In addition to Welfare Director Bondy, those who met with the Commissioners yesterday were Coleman Jennings, president of the Washington Community Chest; J. Clifford Folger, chairman of the 1941 campaign, and E. N. Lewis, assistant chest director.

President Demands Coal Mines Reopen

be immediately replenished, through the resumption of mining operations and in the best interest of the United States and its citizens, I publicly recommend and urge that:

"1. The miners and operators already in agreement resume coal production under the terms of that agreement.

"2. The operators and miners who have not yet reached an agreement enter into wage negotiations and at the same time reopen the mines, the agreement ultimately reachd to be made retroactive to the date of resuming work.

"This will bring about prompt return of a steady and needed supply of coal in the interests of national safety. I am certain that all groups concerned in the wage controversy will put the interest of their fellow countrymen above any other interest and immediately begin making arrangements looking toward the reopening of the mines. Bituminous coal production must be resumed, and promptly. The public interest demands it, and the public interest is paramount."

Plants Bank Furnaces

The bituminous mines have been closed since April 1, when the two-year contract between the union and operators expired, leaving 400,000 miners idle. As coal supplies dwindled, numerous steel plants have been required to bank some of their furnaces, due to coke shortages, and defense officials have insisted that coal production must be resumed shortly to avoid widespread interference with defense activities.

The dispute, complicated by the variety of interests involved, has defied all efforts by the United States Conciliation Service to reach a settlement.

The old contract provided a wage of $6 a day in the North and $5.60 a day in the South, a differential granted Southern operators largely because of different freight charges. The union demanded a straight $7 a day wage, in the new contract, without the Southern differential. Other points at issue gradually were settled, but the wage differential conflict persisted until the Southern operators bolted the negotiations in New York, came to Washington and set up their own association, charging that the union and Northern mine owners had combined against them in the joint negotiations.

Telegraphic Challenges

The Northern operators, meanwhile, agreed to the $7-a-day scale and other points in the negotiations but Lewis refused to send miners back to the Northern mines until the Southerners, who normally employ 150,000 men, likewise had come to terms.

For the past week the Southern group and Lewis have carried on a barrage of telegraphic challenges to resume talks. The operators here agreed to meet the union if the Northern owners were excluded and if negotiations proceeded on their previous offer of an approximate 11 per cent increase in wages. Lewis replied that there must be no advance commitments or restrictions for resuming the talks.

The Southerners insisted that Lewis meet them here; he contended that he was too busy in his New York negotiations to leave there.

Repeated suggestions that the dispute be certified to the National Defense Mediation Board brought no such action. Lewis some time ago said he would not permit the dispute to go before the board because of what he called the board's formula of calling on workers to return to work at once, thereby giving up their strike bargaining power, and then negotiate.

Mediation Outlook Poor

At the same time, it was felt in official circles here that the unusual complexity of the bituminous deadlock would present problems forestalling a quick settlement even by the mediation group.

Only yesterday Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, wired Secretary of Labor Perkins reiterating his insistence that she certify the strike to the board.

On Sunday night the Southern owners here had made a fresh proposal to Lewis that the mines reopen under their offer of an 11 per cent pay boost and that negotiations for a new contract then continue.

Lewis replied in New York that the entire stoppage now depended upon the Federal Government inducing the Southern group to return to the negotiations they had bolted.

Then President Roosevelt acted.

No comment was available late last night on the President's move from any of the parties involved in the dispute.

Countess of Athlone at their Rideau Hall home.

The prime minister described the agreement as a "mobilization of the resources of the continent to defeat Hitler."

There is a possibility, he said, that the Canadian government will move to modify restrictions on Canadians visiting the United States. The restrictions were originally set up to conserve exchange.

Mackenzie King admitted that the ban on pleasure travel to the United States was a two-edged sword and also revealed that there may be some changes in United States passport regulations.

"I made full representations on that phase of the question during my visit," he said.

Copyright by New York Times

The next major step of the United States in its policy of aid to nations facing aggression will be the allocation of $50,000,000 from the stabilization fund with which to support the currency of China.

This was revealed yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as other authoritative sources revealed that one of the main objectives of the new tie-up with Canada as announced Sunday by President Roosevelt and W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister, is to ease the financial strain being placed upon that country by the war, and particularly to relieve the Dominion's growing worries over credit and foreign exchange.

Mr. Morgenthau said that the United States probably would sign the Chinese agreement this week. This would involve the setting aside of $50,000,000 from the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, for the special purpose of stabilizing China's currency. The compact has been in the process of negotiation for the last several weeks between Mr. Morgenthau and other Treasury officials, representing this Government, and Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, and Dr. T. V. Soong, chairman of the board of the Central Bank of China.

To Exchange Defense Articles

Officials were unable yesterday to supply many details about the new agreement with Canada. As explained by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King Sunday, it calls, among other things, for the shipment by Canada to the United States of various munitions, strategice materials and other supplies neded here, and the supplying by this country to the Dominion of numerous defense articles which Canada still must obtain from her southern neighbor. The payments by the United States to Canada on account of this operation were estimated by these two officials at from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000.

Observers viewed this estimate as significant, inasmuch as it was practically identical with the excess of Canada's imports from the United States as compared to her exports to this country. In short, it was almost equal in dollar figures to the so-called "unfavorable" trade balance of Canada with the United States.

Canada is beginning to undergo some very severe financial strains as a result of the war, officials here said yesterday. Her war effort is said by some of our own experts to be beyond her financial strength. In her trade with the United States the country has consistently had an excess of imports over exports, but at the same time has enjoyed a "favorable" trade balance with other British Empire countries. She has been able to use the "favorable" balance from her sisters in the empire to wipe out the "unfavorable" balance with the United States, and to handle the entire transaction on on a free exchange basis. . . . . .

But exchange in Canada has been getting more and more scarce of late. Although England and other empire countries have been paying for many of their Canadian purchases in dollars, the supply of free exchange has been getting lower and lower with the mother country, and consequently with Canada. Any idea of relieving Canada's financial strain by a loan from the United States is ruled out by the prohibitions of the Neutrality Act against extension of loans or credits to belligerent countries.

State fire officials estimated that more than 12,000 Maryland acres were burned over in Sunday's outbreak. Numerous small blazes flared up yesterday throughout the State and at Cumberland, District Forester H. C. Buckingham expressed fear that a fire which broke out in timber land near the Savage River Dam site might become serious. He said it started when WPA workmen burned brush at the edge of a woods.

In Virginia, the State forester's office reported some 30,000 acres of timber land had been burned Sunday, causing damage estimated at $500,000.

Fire officials in both States blamed careless burning of trash for most of the blazes.

In the nearby areas, the fire in Suitland, Md., arear, which burned more than 300 acres, broke out anew yesterday, but was brought under control by Prince Georges volunteere companies after about an hour. A forest fire at Waldorf burned for three and one-half hours, and another blaze at Sharpersville was still raging last night.

The fire near Centreville in Fairfax County was reported under control after it had destroyed much valuable timber.

Hardest hit sections of Maryland were Anne Arundel and Ficomico Counties. Some 3,000 acres were burned and a score of homes and other buildings destroyed in Anne Arundel. There were an estimated 3,800 charred and smouldering acres in Wicomico County yesterday.

Firemen announced the own of Pittsville, which had been threatened, was out of danger. At least 60 men were on constant patrol, however, in fear of new flareups and reserves were standing by.

In Caroline County, Va., three serious fires broke out Sunday. The home of Miss Virginia Dratt, at Woodford, was destroyed in one fire while another burned two barns and some livestock belonging to Miss Lillie Gravitt, near Bowling Green. Her home was saved.

One member of the State forester's office said Sunday's outburst of fires was the worst he had seen in 25 years of forestry work, exceeding the drought year of 1930.

Persevering Forecaster Insists It Will Rain

The weather man last night forecast rain for Washington but he added that it would not arrive before tomorrow night.

Yesterday was still somewhat warmer than normal, but with the mercury back below the 80-degree line.

Highest was 76 at 3 p. m., lowest, 60, at 6:20 a. m., and the mercury is expected to drop to 50 early today. Tuesday is expected to be about the same as yesterday, from their early morning jersey, and the skies will be fair again, the Weather Bureau reported.

Turks Fear They're Next, Then Russia

By the United Press

Istanbul, April 21—Informed Turkish quarters believed tonight that Germany will turn her Balkan blitzkrieg against Turkey within the next eight or ten weeks perhaps as the preliminary to an attack on Russia.

Anticipating an early German attack, the evacuation of Istanbul was speeded today, and tickets were being distributed among thousands of men, women and children to enable the first groups of civilians to leave Thursday or Friday for the Anatolian interior.

Railroad stations and docks were clogged with the luggage of those paying their own transportation into the interior, to Asiatic Turkey, and trains were loaded to capacity. Posters in the streets and advertisments in newspapers announced numerous auctions by persons and firms preparing to abandon Turkey's metropolis.

British to Leave

The British Embassy hoped to evacuate all women and children of the British colony within three weeks.

The defeat of Turkey, in the opinion of informed quarters here, would not help Germany to win the war but would help stave off defeat for a long time because it would bring near two long-desired German goals—the grain and oil of Russia's Ukraine and the Caucasus and the oil of Iran and Iraq.

Imminence of a German attack, in the opinion of best informed quarters here, has been heightened by the stalling of the German and Italian desert "blitz" attack in North Africa and the fact that Athens may soon fall to German forces.

If the Germans reached the Suez Canal across Egypt the Turks and Russians, it was said, might be spared a while longer because the Germans would then have the riches of Africa and the Near East and have gained control of the Eastern Mediterranean bringing Turkey to her knees.

Dardanelles First

Many observers believe that the first task of the German army after knocking Greece out of the war—even though the British may hang onto Peloponesus and Crete—will be to seize the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus Straits as a preliminary to an attack on Russia.

In this manner the Germans would hope to prevent British warships from slipping into the Black Sea and blasting vital German-held points at Varna and Constanza to disrupt the Nazi lines of communication.

This accomplished, the German blitzkrieg undoubtedly would attempt to push into the Near East, either across Russia's Caucasia or across Turkey, depending upon the relative strength of resistance.

Nazi Describes Bitter Fight At Mt. Olympus

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 21.—Seven German soldiers, skilled in mountain climbing, scaled fabled Mount Olympus in a storm last week to plant the swastika battle flag on its crest while German and New Zealand troops fought bitterly below.

Although wind-whipped ice particles cut into their faces, a spokesman said, the seven reached their goal at 11 a. m., April 16.

"There was a snappy military command," he said. "We saluted the flag, saluted the Fuehrer and saluted our German fatherland. We shouted a triple 'Sieg Heil" (Hail, victory!) to the Fuehrer from the heights."

Near the mountain—mythological home of ancient Greek gods—Heinz Huenger, war correspondent, watched Nazi troops engage strong New Zealand units of the Allied forces on a 600-foot high hill, walled with barbed wire, between Olympus and the Aagean Sea.

Artillery Duel Opens

"On the night of April 14," he said, "New Zealanders, out of their stronghold, poured artillery fire along all approaches. The next day our artillery, which was about 4 to 6 miles from the enemy, answered all day long.

"Systematically, the hill and fortifications were covered with shells. On the entire front where we expected our opponent was, we observed hits.

"Then we ourselves were on the receiving end of well-aimed artillery fire.

"That afternoon our motorcyclists made a flank movement up the foothills of Olympus. At night, panzers eased within about 2 miles of the fortifications to give protective fire for advancing engineer and assault troops.

"Time and again our artillery fired all barrels, but April 15 brought no decision because darkness came too quickly.

"Motorcyclists, assault troops and panzers had a bad night. Everywhere there were machine gun nests. They were shooting from all corners and our men could move only with the greatest caution.

"The enemy would move out of one place and suddenly show up in another. He would even stalk up to panzers with machine guns and panzer troops could not easily discern him in the darkness. His macine guns and mortars were well camouflaged.

"Not until the next morning was an advance possible. It had been a tough night. Two panzers came back bringing the bodies of fallen comrades. By about 9 o'clock motorcyclists had worked themselves up to the right flank. To the left, engineers had advanced along the seaside.

"Panzers rolled along in a frontal attack, negotiating inclines of 30 degrees and more. They were half way up the hill when there came two or three dull detonations.

"Those darned fellows had laid mines while they were withdrawing. One panzer halted, others sought a new route over a freshly cultivated field.

"Another detonation came and the leading panzer began to burn. Crew members, injured and burned, were rescued with difficulty. Ammunition in the burning panzer exploded while infantry dashed to the east corner of the fortifications and ten minutes later the swastika was flying from a tower."

Job Now Is to Pinch Off Greeks in Albania, Italian Correspondent Writes

Editor's Note—The following Italian press dispatch is typical of what Italian correspondents at the front are sending to their papers. No American correspondents are permitted at the front with Italian forces.

By Gian Gaspare Napolitano.

Correspondent of Il Popolo Di Roma

With Italian Forces on the Greek Front, April 21.—The big battle to wipe out the Greek army has begun at Perati Bridge where the Italians have bottled up the Greeks.

From now on it is no longer a question of chasing the enemy from Albanian soil, but to hold him tight in pincers.

The battle of Perati Bridge is beginning. Now it is too late for the Greeks to regain the soil of Hellas in mass.

Our vanguard has firmly hooked onto the enemy. Our artillery, carried forward at any cost, is taking the prey in its mouth.

Yesterday was the most intense day of activity since the beginning of this campaign. Aviation intervened in the fight with volleys to the ground, following the enemy flight, hammering it and preceding it.

Bridges on the road where the enemy was seeking to flee were blown up in front of him.

There was only a short distance between the armies, a few kilometers separated the Greek retreat from the Italian advance yesterday.

Our vanguard proceeded on foot and on motorcycles, leaving behind them every impediment of motor vehicles, and even food. Our troops were supplied yesterday from planes. At dawn the distance between the Greeks and us was slight. Now there is contact.

The Greeks retreating in orderly fashion in the early part of their withdrawal lost precious time in systematic destruction of material which they could not transport, burning gasoline and scattering munitions. They did not want to leave anything behind. Artillery was sent back. Motor vehicles of the quartermaster's corps were sent back and infantry and artillery accompanying them brought up the rear and sought to slow down our positions.

The Italians meanwhile broke through the Greeks' left wing and almost simultaneously darted along the coast beyond Porto Palermo.

Now the two wings of the Italian line are closing in on the main body of the Greek army in flight with the greatest speed allowed by terrain, interruptions and the march which is made on foot.

Our soldiers on foot are closing in without rest. Columns of motor vehicles and heavy artillery are waiting for bridges, passages and roads to be repaired. But the infantry is advancing afoot, feeding as it can off dry rations. It is advancing night and day from battle to battle—infantry, Alpinists, Bersaglieri, Blackshirts and mountain artillery.

Men and mules are advancing. Behind them the engineering corps is building roads, repairing bridges, throwing pontoon bridges between banks and motor vehicles are passing across. Where mules cannot advance, men are leaving supply trains and batteries behind and advancing along, now only one kilometer from the Greeks.

With all their arms, artillery caissons, tanks, supply trains and motor vehicles, the Greeks are piling up without space any longer to move about, retreat or face the situation.

At dawn this morning our troops were a kilometer from the bridge of Perati. Our aviation was over the bridge. The Greeks sought to restore the bridge of Perati, ruined by our aviation, but our aviation hit the bridge anew.

D. C. Pupils Return After Vacation

Approximately 90,000 pupils tore themselves away from the business of celebrating spring to return to classes yesterday as District public schools reopened after the ten-day vacation.

In weather so summer-like that it seemed made for longer holidaying, the pupils buckled down to the last stretch of the term ending in June. With no other vacation in sight until the long one beginning June 18, it was time yesterday for the annual pastime of counting the days.

Baltimore Blast Injures Four Women

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 21.—An explosion ripped out the rear end of a home here today and injured four women, one of them critically.

The blast was felt for several blocks, and knocked one of the women, a colored maid, a distance of 40 feet. She was thrown from a ledge where she was washing windows across a porch kitchen onto the sidewalk.

The blast tore off the roof of the kitchen and blew down the walls.

Kenneth Winebrenner, an employe of the city highways bureau, said he was working nearby when one of the women called to him she smelled gas. "The whole thing let go while they were investigating, he said.

Police Sergt. Clarence German said the force of the blast lifted him from his chair half a block away. He and other patrolmen helped beat out flames and sent the injured to a hospital.

Those injured are:

Mrs. Margaret Hellwig, who suffered burns on the entire upper part of the body.

Miss Adeline Reed, a neighbor, burned about the face and arms.

Mrs. Margaret Fuchs, burns of the face, arms and chest.

Emma Wearrion, burns about the body.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

If you ever saw me dashing toward Niagara Falls with a piece of blotting paper, you could score me as the world's leading optimist.

Which is the same way I feel about those who think there ever will be peace again in this fatigued world. Even the pacifists seems to realize that this conflict is something extra, like an elephant hide showing up in a tannery.

I'm going to dash for Niagara Falls this summer, but I will be a tourist. I'm going to keep going to Yellowstone and the West. The war is going to keep the great American tourist at home this summer, and that's where he belongs, like a broom behind a door.

I've been preaching America first for many seasons, and I'm strong for staying in your own land where they speak your language, cook your kind of eating and handle your kind of money.

The great American tourist pays his way as he goes like a silk worm letting out thread. For 50 years he has been bilked and snubbed by the Europeans. I claim that if you go from the gulf to the Great Lakes and from the Atlantic to the Pacific you have seen all the world necessary and a trifle more water than essential.

So stay at home, see America, spend your money where you made it. The Western Continent has as many wonders as the Old World. And we don't have the extra wonder of wondering how long it is going to last.

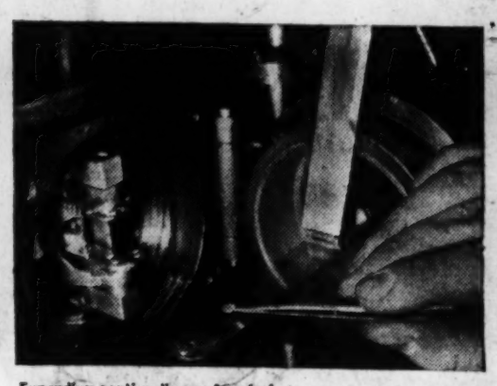
Core of democracy's scientific advancement, whether in cancer research or airplane construction, is the free exchange of ideas in open discussion.

Building for the future, America's free science solves problems of childhood behavior, diseases, and nutrition more helpfully than has been done for any other people.



Expanding continually are America's instruments for mastering the unknown: the electron microscope for magnifying 100,000 times—the klystron tube for transmitting electric power some day without wires—the cyclotron for unlocking hitherto untapped stores of atomic power.

American agricultural science evolves new foods, perfects new ways of producing foods, finds new ways of insuring our food supply against the vagaries of Nature.

Dictatorship's folly is democracy's incalculable gain; scores of great intellects, like that of Albert Einstein, bring priceless talents to this land where science goes unshackled to search for truth, to develop, to create.

Child of heaven or child of hell!

SCIENCE offers mankind knowledge and tools with which to shape a world of surpassing beauty and security.

But science's gifts also make it possible for the wicked, the stupid, and the misguided to plunge our world toward everlasting darkness.

Science is that way. A blessing or a curse. A builder or a destroyer. A child of heaven or a child of hell!

Beyond America's shores, we have seen science become a shackled thing—chained to Stone Age creeds of violence and destruction, perverted to implement gangsterism. Within our shores, we see democracy preserving true science as a force inherently free to question, to criticize—and, therefore, more vigorous and richer in promise than anywhere else in the world.

The Genius of the Free

Even in the disagreeable but now inescapable business of arming for defense against aggression, the free science of democracy holds a clear-cut edge. Not a single weapon being employed today—submarine, tank, dive bomber, bombsight—has had its origin in a Fuehrer-regimented nation. Not a single one of these has been developed to the degree of perfection achieved by democratic freedom and ingenuity. Only in quantity production of these arms have we been temporarily outpaced. And now it is reassuring to know that democracy has at last, in self-defense, given this phase of its resourcefulness the all-out signal.

It is still more heartening, however, to recognize some of the things our science is continuing to create and store up for the better world of tomorrow!

This advertisement is one of a series studying our democratic American way of life.

American laboratories can now promise us virtual independence from many "natural" sources of necessities. Food, fodder, and fiber can now be grown without soil, without rain, without sunlight. Rubber, textiles, the versatile new plastics, are derived successfully from such simple, basic stuff as corn, wood pulp. Plant material is being miraculously converted into coal and petroleum. A new vacuum tube holds promise of enabling us some day to transmit electric power without wires. And the new "atom smasher" brings us close to unlocking prodigious stores of atomic power—power never before tapped by man!

Conquests that Endure

An American scientist recently has carried us a tremendous stride toward conquering mankind's most mysterious diseases, infantile paralysis, influenza, cancer—toward solving the problem of how heredity works—and to the brink of comprehending the very nature of life itself! This he has accomplished by isolating and crystallizing an elusive microorganism known as the tobacco mosaic virus.

Another American has evolved a short-wave beam that can spot airplanes through otherwise impenetrable fog or darkness, from the ground or from other planes. Still another American has perfected Frequency Modulation, a revolutionary system of radio transmission and reception that, among other things, insures perfect radio communication for planes despite the most violent electric or magnetic disturbances. And the laboratories of an American business enterprise have produced a device for determining "absolute altitude" from the earth's uneven surface, a device that should go far toward eliminating mountain-crash plane accidents.

Hope for Tomorrow

What a brave, new world American scientific genius promises us, after peace comes! And what a helpful, inspiring circumstance it is for this genius and for the democracy in which it flourishes to have a free press which gives as many people as possible intelligent understanding of these great things astir, those dazzling horizons unfolding!

LIFE Magazine, from the start, has been peculiarly fitted to inform Americans, to "let them in on" the gigantic tasks and accomplishments and hopes of science. LIFE's unique picture-and-word editorial technique keeps a weekly audience of more than 20,000,000 readers soundly informed—makes what once seemed to them a "heavy" subject (like science) exciting, understandable, significant.

LIFE is proud of the contribution it is making in these crucial times toward the successful functioning of democracy. And, as "America's Most Potent Editorial Force," LIFE is dedicated to continuing this contribution, both now and after these times of crisis have passed.

Hitler Out to Make Arsenal of Europe

By G. H. Archambault.
Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, April 21.—The war having reached a crucial point, Germany is seeking to transform the whole of continental Europe into an arsenal to offset the use of the United States as an arsenal for the benefit of Britain. Naturally, France would have a place in this scheme.

This may serve to explain the situation here which is admittedly tense with the virtual certainty that when Admiral Francois Darlan, vice president of the council of ministers, reaches Paris this week to renew conversations with Otto Abetz, representative of the Reich in France, he will find that stronger pressure than ever will be applied to make France "collaborate."

It is probable that this time "collaboration" will be defined precisely. Hitherto the government in Vichy has been able to limit "collaboration" to economics despite intimations that it might extend to the political and even the military fields. How long can it continue to do so? What would be the consequences of noncompliance? And in the final analysis what form of resistance could it oppose if it should decide to resist? All these questions may find an answer this week. In any case one fact dominates the situation: the victor is always in a position to impose his will on the vanquished.

Paris Press Attacks Leahy

In official circles in Vichy discussion of the matter is eschewed although it is not concealed that events in Greece and the trend in Spain have an important bearing. In Paris, on the other hand, the press takes it for granted that the campaign in the Balkans is practically over and that if France wishes to play an adequate part in a reconstructed Europe she has no time to lose in recognizing the fact. As is their wont Parisian newspapers describe unoccupied France as the last bastion of Anglo-American influence in Europe—the influence of capitalism and of Jews—with the inevitable allusion to the American Ambassador, Admiral Leahy, as the arch-conspirator who pulls the strings.

But pressure from Paris does not stop at that. A number of representatives of the Rassemblement National Populaire have been granted passes by the German authority to cross the line of demarcation and have arrived in Vichy. This national popular group which advocates "collaboration" was formed in Paris some months ago as a retort to the formation in Vichy of a Rassemblement National intended to group together all national energies loyal to Marshal Petain. This group, it is true, is still in the embryonic stage.

The group in Paris addressed an "anguished appeal" to Marshal Petain early in March which contained the following passage:

"We wish to tell you, M. Le Marechal, that we shall not allow France to be assassinated and that we are firmly resolved to use all means in order to assure our common salvation. We tell you this gravely without vain eloquence, but staking our lives on it."

Worse Than Commune

The appeal added that the Rassemblement National Popularie considers itself the natural link between the marshal and the people of France. Some days later Marcel Deat, editor of L'Oeuvre, who helped to found the Paris organization, marked the anniversary of the Commune (March 18, 1871) by hinting that unless "the men in Vichy" accepted "collaboration" they might be preparing an even bloodier revolution.

A prominent leader of the Rassemblement is Jean Fontenoy, who has made a number of fiery addresses. There are rumors today that M. Fontenoy is missing from his home in a Paris suburb. Some speak of kidnaping, even of murder, by political enemies, possibly connected with the dissident movement. And there is talk of reprisals should there have been foul play. No mention of Fontenoy's disappearance has yet appeared in the French press.

In Vichy the members of the Rassemblement are telling all and sundry of the dire consequences of repudiation of "collaboration" whereas its acceptance would signify the release of prisoners of war, reduction of the cost of occupation, easing of the line of demarcation, and the return to the Nord and Pas de Calais departments to French administrative control.

These are the selfsame benefits which, according to the supporters of Pierre Laval, France lost by his dismissal from office on December 13. It follows that there is renewed talk of Laval's return to power. Parisian papers make it clear that in their view such return should be complete, that he should "hold the reins of government" with the implication that Marshal Petain would be merely chief of state with no executive authority. All this has become familiar talk by now and competent observers are inclined to discount it.

Nevertheless cabinet changes in Vichy are possible. There are some who believe that when he returns from Paris Admiral Darlan may abandon the portfolio of foreign affairs which would go to Fernand de Brinon at present delegate of the French government to the occupying authority. De Brinon was appointed by Laval whose close friend he is.

German Wheat Fails to Ease Hunger of France, Reporter Asserts

By Ralph Heinzen
Copyright by United Press

Toulouse, April 20 (Delayed).—Wheat has reached the hunger belt of southern France from the German zone, but millions of persons still are suffering from hunger and malnutrition, this correspondent found during a survey of the Toulose area during the weekend.

The limited German grain supplies, it was emphasized, were the result of an exchange agreement and were not a gift, and the general food situation is worse than when the correspondent surveyed this region a month ago.

The menace of a bread famine has been removed for the next two months, but there still is an almost complete shortage of meat, no cheese, little milk, no butter and no olive oil.

The general ration of more than 10,000,000 people, according to French food experts, is almost totally lacking in fats.

I found it practically impossible to obtain enough food daily to satisfy one's hunger in Toulouse or the coast provinces as far as Monte Carlo. In my observation it was a fact that most people have too little to eat.

American milk is being distributed by the Red Cross, and this has solved part of the problem of feeding nursing children, but older children and adults still are on short rations.

Pierre Monzat, general secretary of the department of Haut Garonne and an expert who collaborated with Herbert Hoover in feeding Belgium during the World War, is in charge of pooling food reserves of the Garonne Valley for distribution in the hunger belt.

More than 10,000,000 persons, he said today, will face extreme hunger by June 15, despite the German grain shipments, unless help comes from abroad.

"For 10 days," Monzat said, "we have been receiving small wheat shipments from the (German) occupied zone. Some days it is 10 tons and some days 12 or 15 tons. The amount is not sufficiently great to change the general starvation outlook of a month ago. Of 11 departments (administrative districts) between the Atlantic and Mediterranean coasts, Garonne and the Pyrenees alone need 25,800 tons of wheat a month. Seven departments from the Pyrenees to the Alps Mountains, need 25,000 tons more. We have about 55,000 tons with small shipments arriving from across the interzone boundary. By scraping the bottom we can stretch our present stocks possibly to June 15. Thereafter it appears there will be no wheat and no bread. We cannot count on receiving Morocean wheat before the last week of July and our own French domestic wheat will not be available before mid-August.

"France, therefore, will feel the pinch by the middle of June unless help comes from abroad."

Visits to bakeries confirmed Monzat's statements that the population is largely on a day-to-day, hand-to-mouth bread basis. Each bakery gets two or three sacks of flour a night in return for delivering an equivalent amount in bread tickets from the ration books of consumers. Any baker caught selling bread without obtaining tickets has his supply cut down by an equivalent amount.

The present bread ration is 240 grams—about one-half pound—a day for the average adult. Those engaged in very heavy work get 340 grams. The aged get only 160 grams, or, if they surrender both their bread and meat tickets, they can get 1½ pints of thin skimmed milk in their place.

The bread is dark—about 90 per cent whole grain of wheat and substitute cereals. It tastes well enough but dries to the consistency of hardtack after about 48 hours.

The wheat furnished by the Germans comes from stocks earmarked for the German army when it overran France. In return for it, the French must furnish vegetables, fruits and cheese. Actually, only berries are being furnished as they now are ripening in large quantities. The Germans also have traded some wheat for cotton and woolen rags.

Last month, I found, about 10 per cent of the former supply of farm animals has been slaughtered because of the shortage of fodder. Most of the animals were work oxen, the loss of which will hamper future farm production. Horses are subject to military requisition and may not be slaughtered. In some of the poorer districts peasants have eaten their donkeys and mules.

Red Cross Reports Two Ships Lost

By International News Service

Destruction of a ship bearing a $120,000 Red Cross relief cargo to Greece and a four-weeks silence from a second vessel carrying a $2,000,000 Red Cross shipment to Athens, were disclosed tonight.

It was the first specific loss of any Red Cross cargo through acts of warfare revealed since beginning of the European conflict.

Red Cross officials said that the Greek freighter Gregoris, loaded with consignments of drugs, blankets, clothing and food for discharge at Athens, was lost "somewhere in the South Atlantic" three weeks ago.

They said they were not advised whether the ship was sunk by a torpedo or by a mine.

Another Greek freighter, the Cassandra Louloulis, en route to Athens with the $2,000,000 Red Cross cargo, has "not been heard from for four weeks," it was conceded.

Though the Red Cross acknowledges that some of its shipments destined to Britain may have fallen prey to German submarines in the counterblockade zone, there has never been any announcement of such an instance.

The British ministry of economic warfare, it was explained, usually requests secrecy about details of such losses and has made it a policy not to name the individual ships sunk since they are normally English flag vessels.

Tonight's disclosure resulted from a passage in a speech delivered to the Red Cross convention by Ernest J. Swift, vice chairman of the society in charge of foreign operations.

In his speech Swift said:

"The shipment of supplies to Greece has presented tremendous difficulties. Ships require 75 to 80 days to make the trip, the last part of which is through submarine infested waters.

"One ship was lost en route to Greece even before it reached the Cape of Good Hope, and the other is mentioned nightly in our prayers for its safety."

Inquiries at the Red Cross national headquarters elicited the names of the ships and the known details respecting their voyages. Both had sailed from New York.

C. & O. Worker Killed in Fall

Buchanan, Va., April 21 (AP).—Haden Alfred Dudley, 49, of Springwood, Botetourt County, was killed about 2:30 o'clock this afternoon when he lost his balance and fell from a 75-foot bluff overlooking the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway tracks a mile north of Buchanan.

A C. & O. section hand, Dudley was engaged with several other workers in clearing away growth on the road's right of way when he fell. At an inquest held by Dr. W. N. Breckinridge, coroner, Commonwealth's Attorney Philip Kohen, Sheriff Noftsinger and Deputy Ed Williamson, it was determined that death was accidental.

Dudley leaves a wife and a young child.

Red Cross Convention Told of Hard Tasks to Come

war the Red Cross has again given tangible expression to the traditional generosity of the American people."

In a message from Queen Elizabeth of England to the convention an expression of "heartfelt thanks for all that they have done for the people of this country during the past year."

By National Chairman Norman H. Davis in the keynote address that the Red Cross is aiding war victims of "organized brute force" which "has inflicted hardships almost beyond human endurance upon millions of peoples whose only sin was a strong desire to live and let live."

The present crisis necessitates an expansion of Red Cross activities on the home front as well as on an international scale, Chairman Davis declared.

At last night's session an orchestra under the direction of Frank Black, a chorus of 125 voices from the Washington Choral Society, Franchot Tone, the actor, and Lucille Manners and Conrad Thibault, singers, joined to present a tone poem, "Pledge to America," broadcast over a Nation-wide N. B. C. network.

The tone poem depicted Red Cross aid to war victims abroad and services vital to national defense at home.

McNutt Speaks

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator, declared in an address to the convention last night that "safeguarding the health and welfare of all the people, both civil and military, is an essential sector of total defense."

Discussing the Federal Government's efforts in gearing together all activities which contribute to community welfare, he said, "the health, the morale, the character of the American people—in a word, the survival of our democratic way of life—depends on how we meet this challenge."

In his keynote address at the opening session yesterday morning Chairman Davis said the present crisis necessitates an expansion of Red Cross activities on the home front as well as on an international scale.

Almost $27,000,000 has been expended on war relief by the American society since the invasion of Poland, with Great Britain the largest single beneficiary, he reported. He added that approximately 23 ships a month are now carrying supplies to the beleaguered island.

Forecasts Huge Expense

"The responsibilities we shoulder are becoming heavier," he said. "To meet these tasks we must have a greatly increased roll call this fall over that of last year. Members constitute the strength and determine the extent of Red Cross work."

It is possible that Red Cross services to the armed forces of the United States during the coming year will call for a minimum outlay of more than $5,000,000, he said, explaining that hospitals are being enlarged, new ones rushed to completion and the general welfare program greatly expanded.

Efforts are now being made to assist Yugoslavia in addition to Britain, Greece, unoccupied France, Finland, Spain and China, he stated.

Material aid being sent Greece was described as "very substantial." Davis revealed that shipments to the embattled little country are going around the Cape of Good Hope—a voyage of 75 to 80 days.

A 16-year-old Portland, Oreg., high school boy, Daniel Wessler, spokesman for the Junior Red Cross at the plenary session, discussed the cause of the world's sufferings as a challenge to his generation.

"Only when the genius and productivity which we now use to produce machines, entertainment and instruments for the destruction of life are directed by good will, social vision, and humanitarian motives, toward the building of a new world of human beings, may we dare hope for better conditions," he declared.

Burton Praises Nurses

Senator Burton, of Ohio, said that "Red Cross nurses and helpers behind every battle line do more for the cause of final peace than can any commanding general."

He said that one course is clear for America. "It is the need for our support of the Red Cross and our encouragement of the extension of its services everywhere."

Rear Admiral Wat Tyler Cluverius, U. S. N., retired, was introduced as the convention chairman. The invocation was delivered by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

Enrollment in the Red Cross' Volunteer Special Services has grown from 53,000 women when war broke out in September, 1939, to an enrollment of 1,000,000, Mrs. Dwight Davis, head of the special service, told the afternoon session.

5 Million Garments Knitted

These women volunteers have knitted nearly 5,000,000 garments, sewed 3,200,000 more, made 21,000,000 surgical dressings and taken first aid training by the tens of thousands, she said.

Girl Dancees To Organize On Army Lines

Privates from nearby Army posts may find themselves dancing with corporals, captains and colonels next week, after more than 900 registered Government girl dancees here complete organization of their "dance battalion" Thursday night in the departmental auditorium.

Military ranks and a military-type organization are expected to be adopted by the girls, who were "drafted" to dance with selectees at Defense Council balls, according to Chairman Archie Edwards.

But it will not involve K. P. duty, at least at first, one dancee pointed out.

At the same time, tryouts will be held for an all-girl dancing chorus to entertain at Fort Meade, at Central High School, Twelfth and Clifton Streets Northwest. Sponsored by the radio and show committee of the council, the chorus units will be trained in tap dancing and Hawaiian numbers. More than 200 have already registered for entertainment units, it was announced yesterday.

Four dances are scheduled by the council this week at nearby Army posts, tonight at Fort Belvoir, Wednesday at Fort Meade, Thursday at Belvoir and Saturday in Alexandria for Belvoir troops. Entertainments will be held Thursday and Friday at Fort Meade.

Wage increases, under a plan for automatic raises, will eventually reach $104,000 annually. Other provisions include the five-day 40-hour week, payment upon discharge of two weeks' pay for every year of service, job guarantees for employes drafted and payment to any dependents of draftees of half the difference between the Times salary and a conscript's wage up to $100 a month.

A COMPARISON of prices will show that the Pontiac De Luxe "Torpedo" does cost a little more than the de luxe models of the lowest-priced three. However, this difference itself is not important. In fact, it is so slight that owners say it's hardly noticeable when spread over monthly payments.

But the extra dependability this slight difference buys IS important—and in our files are hundreds of letters from owners indicating that the phrase—"Built to Last 100,000 Miles"—only begins to describe Pontiac's long life and trouble-free performance. And when you add the scores of other advantages Pontiac provides, plus the fact that Pontiac's great reputation for dependability means it's worth more to you at trade-in time, then you'll understand why more people are buying Pontiac this year than ever before. Hitler Holds Numerous Advantages Kaiser Lacked in Battle of Atlantic

Four-Motored Plane Worst Foe of Ships

(How Britain and Germany are running a deadly race for final victory—each most vulnerable in a different way—is revealed in the first of a series of articles about the latest phases of Britain's life-and-death struggle by J. Reagan McCrary, International News Service special correspondent. Mr. McCrary has just returned from a 70-day survey of Britain's "home front" which he began by flying the Atlantic in an American-made bomber being delivered to the R. A. F.)

By J. Reagan McCrary
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, April 21.—The inexorable arithmetic of shipping losses is creeping up on Britain, precisely as the inexorable arithmetic of dwindling oil reserves is creeping up on the Axis. And the "timetables" are about the same.

Top men in Britain, the very top men, admit that Britain will be in trouble within the next nine months if the present rate of shipping losses is not checked.

I would be inclined to cut that deadline to three months.

Hitler's raiders have sunk more than 1,000 British, neutral and Allied ships that were to have poured vital goods and war supplies into Britain—more than 5,000,000 tons of shipping.

Length of Hauls Increased

Britain is losing ships either sunk, abandoned or damaged beyond the bombed and jammed capacity of British shipyards to repair them—losing ships at twice the maximum replacement rate.

And every day, increasing pressure on distant battle fronts is increasing the length of the hauls for British ships.

Simple arithmetic shows that the carrying capacity of bottoms diverted from the American run to the Suez run is automatically cut to one-third by the longer route. And the hazard of exposure to Nazi raiders is increased threefold.

That's why Britain prays for the protection of the United States Navy for shipping bound to her home and foreign battle fronts.

Bombs Miss Docks

I believe Britain can keep her docks open; I've been through one of the worst raids on Liverpool. I saw showers of fire-bombs aimed at the docks, land on the golf course of Wallasey, where Bobby Jones won his great championship 11 years ago. It looked like a prairie fire had passed that way after the raid. But the docks weren't even scorched.

Dock Road is about 7½ miles long. Not more than a few blocks of docks were knocked out in a raid that flattened civilian objectives three blocks from Dock Road as if a herd of giant elephants had stampeded through Liverpool.

And it was the same story at Bristol, Swansea, Plymouth, Clydeside—the wives and children of Britain's merchant seamen were blasted to shreds in their shelter beds, but the docks are still open, still waiting for the life-blood supplies that Britain's bearded men of the sea still bring through the raiders of the island fortress.

Three Types of Raiders

Three types of raiders prey on British shipping—like sharks, panthers and hawks:

1. Least formidable are the surface raiders; but this is important: During World War I, the Kaiser didn't get any raiders through the British blockade of either the size or the speed of some of the raiders preying on British shipping in World War II. At least two of the surface raiders used by the Nazis can't be caught by any warship flying the Union Jack, with the exception of the H. M. S. Hood.

2. Next most destructive are the submarines. Hitler has about 200, operates them in shifts of 50. His advantage this time is that the U-boats operate from bases from the North Pole to Portugal—and most ominous is the possibility that U-boats may soon operate from bases as far south as Dakar.

3. Most destructive are the giant four-motored Focke-Wulf FW 200K Kurriers, to give them their full title. These bombers are developments of the Focke-Wulf Condor civil transport as Britain's Hudson bomber is a development of America's Lockheed transport types.

Crews Wear Civil Dress

The Kurrier has two full swing gun turrets on top of its fuselage; a huge bomb "welt" on its belly, which also houses air cannon to fire backward or forward at ranges of 2,000 yards.

Kurrier crews wear civilian clothes. In case they have to come down in Ireland or in Portugal, the civilian clothes improve their chance for escape. Each crew numbers six men.

No effective method of combatting these Kurriers has yet been devised. But weeks ago, a group of Americans in London, eager to find some use for the more than 500 American-made tomahawks (P-40's here) that are in dead storage as unused "reserves" somewhere in England, urged on proper authorities this scheme:

Put catapults on merchant ships that can launch one of these tomahawks to fight the Kurriers. Forget about recovering the fighter—one fighter for one bomb is a good swap. The pilot could land it in a "slick" at sea, and probably escape alive.

Ordinarily a fighter would not be much of a match for a well-armed bomber. But with the whole ocean for aerobatics and the chase, chances are even that the kurrier would be bagged.

And there are plenty of Americans in the R. A. F. who would volunteer for the job, just for a chance to prove to the British that American-made fighters can "do a job."

A dozen factors help Hitler in World War II that were not on the Kaiser's side in the battle of the Atlantic of World War I.

And it is disturbing to recall that the Germans in the last show sent 849,000 tons of Allied shipping to the bottom of the sea in the black month of April, 1917—three out of every four ships under Allied flags were knocked out.

This time, without any aid from Italy, France, Japan, or America—all Allies in World War I; with a coastline 2,000 miles long from which enemy raiders can operate; with only half the number of destroyers she had last time available now for convoy escort, Britain's odds in the battle of the Atlantic are different.

Odds Lengthen

Gallant and fearless are Britain's merchant seamen—14,000 of them died in World War. I.

They and their rusty ships that sail under the red ensign are taking their beating without breaking or bending. But lengthening the odds against those seamen is the muddle in the nerve centers that should be running shipping.

British shipping is in the hands of nine different and mutually jealous ministries.

1. The ministry of shipping under Ronald Cross is supposed to run the show.

2. But the admiralty, under First Lord A. V. Alexander—the man who built up Britain's cooperatives—is charged with building and repairing merchant ships and convoying them between ports on either side of the Atlantic.

3. And the minister of transport is responsible for unloading them—a recent drive to increase the tempo of the turn-around still leaves British shipping wasting more tonnage in ports than the 12-inch guns of the raiding Scharnhorst and Gneisenau can sink.

Food and Supply

4. The ministry of food is in charge of food cargoes.

5. The ministry of supply also has a word about what cargoes are to be carried.

6. And also the ministry of mines, where coal is concerned.

7. And the ministry of petroleum, where tanker tonnage is involved.

8. And the ministry of aircraft production says what space shall be reserved for bringing planes from America.

9. And finally, because a ship becomes a "factory" when she is berthed, the home office intervenes in the shipping tangle.

Coordination, a system of priorities, is absolutely essential if Britain is to get the most out of her inadequate shipping.

You hear people saying in England: "What shipping needs is what aircraft production needed . . . a man who knows how to smash through red tape . . . shipping needs a Beaverbrook."

I believe that in her darkening hours, Britain will find another Beaverbrook—and another Nelson, too. I know that Britain has the iron men for her iron ships.

And it will be on the seas as it was in the air last fall; and this is not emotional, wishful thinking, because the records bear me out:

Britain will win the battle of the Atlantic if the odds are no worse than 3-to-1 against her, and Hitler will need bases at Dakar, control of Gibraltar and the Suez, and the whole French fleet before he achieves that 3-to-1 edge over England on the seas, seas that England has ruled since Nelson beat Napoleon at Trafalgar and knocked him spinnig toward his Waterloo.

But if the Axis wins the battle of the Atlantic South America becomes Hitler's good neighbor.

Haiti Rubber Project to Help U. S.

Miami, Fla., April 21 (AP).—The President-elect of Haiti said today that vast rubber plantings would be undertaken on the island under an agreement with the United States.

"Very encouraging" experimental plantings have been made," said Elie Lescot, named by the Haitian Congress last week to a five-year term as successor to President Stenio Vincent.

"Every part of Haiti is capable of growing this crop," he added.

Lescot and a party arrived here by Pan American Clipper en route to Washington, where the President-elect will confer with officials.

He will relinquish his post as Haitian Minister to the United States before returning to Port Au Prince for the inauguration May 15.

Hull Indicates U. S.-Soviet Talks Will Lag

Secretary of State Cordell Hull minimized yesterday the importance of the talks which have been going on between this Government and the Soviet Union for some months past, saying they had been desultory and had been concerned only with minor matters. The statement was taken to indicate that the Administration attaches little importance to their continuance.

Mr. Hull's statement at his press conference was the first official intimation since the signing of the Russo-Japanese Neutrality Pact last week that there may be a lag in the Welles-Oumansky talks which Administration officials had hoped might provide a means of keeping the Soviet Union from a long-threatened rapprochement with Japan and the Axis powers. Now that Russia has come to terms with Japan, there appeared little interest here in making any concessions to Russia either politically or in matters of trade.

Secretary Hull said the talks with the Russians dealt with such matters as protests from both sides regarding various actions by officials. While he did not amplify this statement, it was generally taken to mean that the talks had been devoted in part to complaints, largely from the Russian side, regarding trade restrictions.

Thinks Pact Overestimated

When Mr. Hull was asked if he had any comment to make on the article which appeared in Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party, on Saturday describing the Russo-Japanese pact as "a bewildering blow" at the plans of United States and British interests whom it accused of having conspired to draw Russia into war against Japan or Germany, he said he stood by his statement of last week in which he declared that the pact could be overestimated and was descriptive of a situation that had existed for some time.

The Secretary said he knew nothing about a reported accord between the United States, Britain, Australia and the Dutch East Indies for defense in the Southern Pacific, as had been reported. Three-cornered conversations initiated last autumn between the British and Australian envoys here and Secretary Hull were repeated last month while talks have recently been held in Manila with the participation of Dutch officials.

On the House floor Representative Bender (Republican), Ohio, called on the State Department yesterday to explain the mission in the United States of "Russian engineers" who, he said, had been given access to domestic industrial plants.

"I believe," he asserted, "that the American people do not favor this kind of diplomatic 'courtesy.'

"What possible justification can there be for revealing the world's best equipment to the Soviet Union? Are we allied with Russia?

"Would our State Department welcome a Japanese engineering mission to our shores? What is the meaning of deportation proceedings against a man who is charged with the 'crime' of communism, or the jailing of a Communist leader, when we are simultaneously revealing the last word in our industrial armament to the masters of these very men?"

City Fathers Accept Safety Award

DISTRICT'S RECORD CITED—Washington's 1940 accident-prevention record—the best of any city of more than 500,000 population—was praised last night at the meeting of the National Traffic Safety Council which presented the District with a bronze plaque for the good record. Col. John Stilwell, president of the council, awarded the plaque. Commissioner John Russell Young accepted it for the District. Left to right—Commissioners David McCoach and Young, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Stilwell, and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer nities everywhere who realize the necessity of redoubling their efforts to safeguard and protect human life."

Washington, the National Traffic Safety Council announced, had received the safety award because its reduction of traffic deaths to 79 for the year had given it the lowest fatality rate per population among the country's 14 largest cities. Other factors included its educational campaign, setting up of an accident prevention unit, research and traffic engineering projects. The motor vehicle death rate here was 60 per cent below the national average.

Senator Burton, who two years before as Mayor of Cleveland had received the safety award for his city declared that the Nation's battle of production and transportation was part of the defense program.

Psychological Opportunity

"The casualties suffered are as tragic and real as any on the battlefield," he said.

The Ohio legislator, who as a member of the Senate District Committee, declared that Washington had a "priceless opportunity" to capitalize upon the psychology involved in winning the award.

"This award should be the occasion in Washington for an immediate and enlarged educational safety campaign," Burton said.

"It should also be the occasion for the Federal Government and the National Safety Council to recognize this excellent start made by the people and officials of the District toward realizing the national opportunity for Washington to become the traffic safety Capital of America."

He urged that the National Safety Council create a special committee to submit to the President, Congress and the District Commissioners a thoroughgoing and continuing study of traffic here, to serve as a model for the rest of the Nation.

Lists Advantages

In an analysis of Washington's traffic conditions, Senator Burton listed the following advantages: The community is a planned city; it has benefited from continuing programs of planned development; traffic administration is separated from politics; driving weather is generally good.

Against the advantages he pointed out that Washington faces such handicaps in its traffic regulation that its success in winning first place . . . is a substantial tribute to the District officials who made it possible."

As handicaps the Senator listed: Congestion caused by monumental parks and square; intersection difficulties created by the diagonal avenues; large number of buses, street cars and taxis; lighting problems created by the trees lining the streets; extreme parking difficulties; concentrated rush hours; 250,000 vehicles on the streets each day 80,000 of which are transient; tremendously expanded activities and increased traffic hazards because of the national defense program.

Challenge, Says Young

Commissioner Young, on behalf of the District, declared on accepting the award: "It challenges us to go on to do more and to do a better job of accident prevention than we have done in the past."

Acceptance speeches on behalf of their States and cities were also made by Gov. Robert A. Hurley of Connecticut, winner of the grand State award and Eastern States division; Mrs. Leon C. Phillips, wife of the Governor, and Walter Johnson, highway commissioner, of Oklahoma, Southern States division; Representative Homer D. Angell, of Oregon, Western division; M. J. Hoffmann, director of the highway department, of Minnesota, Midwestern State division.

Also Village President Walter P. Saunders of La Grange, Ill., 10,000 to 25,000 population; Mayor Charles A. Winslow of Watertown, N. Y., 25,000 to 50,000 population; Mayor James I. Kauffman of Lakewood, Ohio, 50,000 to 100,000 population; Mayor E. D. Bass of Chattanooga, Tenn., 100,000 to 250,000; Mayor Woodall Rodgers of Dallas, Tex., and Mayor Pro-tem John C. Rodahaffer of Kansas City, Mo., 250,000 to 500,000 population, and cowinners of the grand city award.

Edward G. Robinson, film star, was awarded a special plaque because of his traffic safety appeals on his "Big Town" radio program. Col. John Stilwell, president of the National Safety Council, was toastmaster.

Houston Named To Senate Seat

Jacinto Day on the battlefield where the forces of Sam Houston defeated a Mexican army in the decisive engagement of the Texas war for independence.

Miss Marguerite Houston, who lives in the general's residence, said her father had accepted the appointment but had not said whether he would assume his duties actively. She said he was too fatigued to talk over the telephone.

A State trooper stood guard at the house and no one was permitted to visit the appointee.

In Washington, Senate officials said that, to the best of their recollection, Houston was the oldest man ever named to the Senate.

Houston, a retired brigadier general of the Texas National Guard, has spent most of his life in Texas as an attorney, militarist, civic leader and historian. He retired in 1917 to his small home at Laporte, on Galveston Bay near Houston, and since has gained a reputation as a painter of historical scenes.

A New Deal Candidate?

Meanwhile, in Washington, possibility that an Administration candidate may enter the Texas special election race for the seat of the late Senator Sheppard developed.

Appointment by Gov. O'Daniel of Houston to serve until the June 28 election date increased the probability that O'Daniel will run and will have Administration opposition, informed Texans in the Capital said.

Representative Dies, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and Texas Attorney General Mann already have tossed in their hats, but O'Daniel has not announced his decision whether to run.

Two Administration Democrats in the Texas Congressional delegation are known to have been urged to enter the campaign against the field—Representatives Lyndon B. Johnson and Wright Patman.

There were strong indications that Patman would announce, but friends expressed doubt that he would run if Johnson decided to. Johnson was in Texas over the weekend and has not returned to Washington.

Both New Dealers

Either Patman or Johnson would receive Administration support over other presein or prospective candidates, it was indicated.

Patman, somewhat to the left of the New Deal, has gone along with the Administration on virtually all legislation. Johnson was the Administration's liaison man in the last Congressional elections.

Dies, whose campaign is already under way, on the other hand, has clashed repeatedly with the President on domestic legislation and on conduct of the Dies inquiry.

O'Daniel, a former Republican, has never played ball with "the professionals," as he calls the politicians. A former flour salesman, he converted his radio advertising programs into a campaign to win election twice as Governor. Espousing old age pension taxes that the Legislature has not yet adopted, he still conducts his programs every week from his executive mansion.

50% Rise Sought In Income Tax

and now paying $24.20, he would pay $46.20. If in the $3,000 net income class, now taxed at $83.60, he would have to pay $145.

Surtaxes would be raised to increase the yield sharply in the $5,000 to $25,000, scaling off in the already heavily taxed field above $50,000, one informed person said.

Would Tax Securities

A plan to reach billions in tax-exempt or partially tax-exempt securities if it can be done legally was said to have been broached, it was said.

The corporation income tax rate would be stepped up from 24 per cent to 30 per cent, and one informant said the present $40,000 exemption from estate taxes would be reduced to $25,000.

As previously reported, existing excises would be increased more than a third on the average and many of the old World War excises would be revived. Among the increases proposed in present excise tax rates was a boost of 75 cents a thousand in the tax on cigarettes, $1 a barrel in the tax on beer $1 a gallon on liquor and 16 2-3 cents a gallon on wine.

Revival of the 2-cent tax on bank checks, a 10 per cent tax on passenger transportation, a 5 per cent tax on chewing gum and candy and 1 cent a bottle on soft drinks were also projected.

One Cent Rise on Gasoline

As discussed in an earlier conference, the Treasury also recommended an increase of 1 cent a gallon in the Federal tax on gasoline and an increase of 3½ per cent in the tax on new automobiles.

Departures from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's original recommendations included a request for $3,600,000,000 in new revenue, as against $3,444,000,000 first suggested. Abandoned was the plan to bring about 2,000,000 new taxpayers into the revenue system by lowering exemptions for married persons from $2,000 to $1,800. This would remain at $2,000 and the single exemption at $800. The $400 credit for each dependent would be continued.

Protesting the committee's secrecy rule, Republican members conferred following the meeting with Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority committeeman. In a formal statement, Treadway called it "unfair to the public" not to permit full publicity of the specific tax proposals made to the committee by the Treasury Department.

Would Call Morgenthau

Treadway served notice that at this morning's executive session he will demand that public hearings begin this afternoon, "with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as the first witness. In this way those affected will have an opportunity to study the proposals."

Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, earlier was reported to have remonstrated with Chairman Doughton against adoption of the secrecy motion.

The minority statement by Treadway said "there has been much misinformation because of the secrecy which has been imposed and it would be better for the people to have the real facts than to be misled and unduly aroused by the unauthentic reports which have appeared from time to time."

Doughton declined to divulge any details of the testimony, pointing out that the committee had not yet acted on the Treasury plan. He said there was no need to "alarm the people over something that might not happen." Doughton said he thought the committee would approve such parts of the plan as "we think wise" but first would want to hear from the staff of the joint Congressional committee on internal revenue. He indicated there were some points of difference between the joint committee tax staff and the Treasury.

Joint committee experts are scheduled to lay their own plan for raising the needed revenue before the committee this morning.

Carelessness With Fire

Forest fires circling the District and sweeping eight States early this week demonstrated the result of carelessness in one of the hottest and driest Aprils on record. Here the average temperature has been 18 degrees above normal for the last seven days. Up till yesterday there had been no measurable rain since the fifth of the month—a 15-day drought which has only one equal on the books for this time of the year. That was in 1871, when the first statistics for the District were compiled.

The observation of District Fire Chief Porter, that brush fires are most prevalent on Sundays, is a pretty good indication of the responsibility. A match or cigarette carelessly tossed aside by a motorist, a blaze kindled by picnickers, or leaves or grass set afire by a spring-cleaning householder, may touch off such conflagrations as those which raged around Centerville, Va., burned out 10,000 acres in Maryland, and razed 16 houses in Anne Arundel County. The appeal for care with fire is oft-repeated, but it will bear continued repetition as long as it is not being heeded. Matches and cigarettes should be extinguished before discarding. If a gardener feels compelled to burn leaves instead of saving them for valuable mulch, he should pick a calm day, add the fuel gradually to a small pile in the open, and never leave the spot for a moment until the last spark is out.

Japan And The Pact

The reaction in Japan to the action of Yosuke Matsuoka in concluding a treaty of neutrality with Russia has by no means been as completely favorable as he may have hoped. While there appears to be a considerable body of opinion in the island empire which points to the pact as a great victory for Japan, critics are not lacking who insist that the Bolsheviks got the better of the bargain, and that the advantages to be derived from the agreement are all on Russia's side, with Japan getting nothing in return. It was in reply to these critics that Mr. Matsuoka, on his arrival in Manchukuo, hastened to declare that the benefits of the pact are two-sided. "I do not deny," he said, "that the pact is advantageous to the Soviet Union, but it is beneficial to Japan, too. I have concluded no treaty and issued no statement that did not benefit Japan and Manchukuo."

Mr. Matsuoka was careful not to specify precisely what benefits Japan will receive from the pact. The fact that both sides have begun to withdraw troops from the Soviet-Manchukuo border suggests, however, that Japan may now find it possible to shift at least part of the well-trained Kwantung army for service elsewhere, possibly against the British in Malaya, provided the world situation becomes propitious for such a move. With the Germans victorious in the Balkans, and threatening Suez, and with the American state of mind temporarily one of dangerous apathy, Japan may, of course, decide that now is the moment to strike out against Singapore or the Dutch East Indies. Round-about confirmation of this possibility is to be found in obviously inspired reports published in certain Japanese newspapers regarding an alleged military and naval pact between the United States, Great Britain, China, British India, Australia and the Netherlands for the purpose of strengthening their defenses in the Far East and opposing Japan's southward advance. In part this report, which has no evidence to justify it, may be designed to smoke out the intentions of the United States regarding its course in southeastern Asia. In part it may also be designed to prepare Japanese public opinion for a rash venture by suggesting that unless Japan acts quickly she will be ringed round by enemies.

The maneuver is a crude one, but it is not to be dismissed as meaningless on that account. Matsuoka himself and the powerful military element whose spokesman he is, are under the temptation to cash in on the Russian agreement with the least possible delay, particularly since the doubts and hesitations which exist in some Japanese quarters on the question of how far and how fast Japan should move at this time may tend to increase with the passage of time. So far as the United States is concerned, a policy of the utmost vigilance in the Far East and consultation with the anti-Axis powers, coupled with redoubled assistance to China, is one peremptorily demanded by the situation.

Canadian Role

The difficulty which the economic pact with Canada is destined to overcome is Canada's shortage of dollars. Too little is known in our country of Canada's war effort, and our ignorance was shown in the reflections upon the Dominion which were expressed in Congress during the lend-lease debate. But in fact Canada has been and is straining her resources to the uttermost. Currently she is spending 40 per cent of her national income on it, and if we were to match her outlay, our defense bill would be no less than $32,000,000,000 a year. Moreover, Canada's machine has to be fed on raw material purchases in the United States. And this draft on her dollars is additional to the draft that is caused normally by the dual need of paying for ordinary imports and of keeping up her debt service.

The new arrangement will reequip the Dominion with dollars in a manner made possible by the lend-lease authority. Hitherto the dollars which have been made available by our purchases in the Dominion have merely gone to reduce the size of the Dominion's obligations to the United States. Now we intend to step up our defense purchases in the Dominion, and to pay for them in dollars without regard to other items in our common account. Standing by itself, however, this part of the arrangement would merely mitigate the Canadian problem, not solve it. Accordingly another provision in this new understanding would ease the purchasing problem of the Canadians. This will be done by allowing the Canadians access to our arsenal under the lend-lease authority, at least for the stuff which they require for Britain's needs. It is understood that the Canadians are in no dollar stress for the financing of their own war effort. But, since the Battle of the Atlantic got under way, heavier orders have been arriving from Britain which make our financing aid essential.

This is only a wartime arrangement, like the joint defense pact. Together, however, these agreements suggest that the two countries are engaged in laying the foundation of a collaboration which may and should persist into the postwar world. The one postwar aim to which there will be common consent is that nations can no longer live unto themselves. America's choice is to be leader of a world rid of Hitler or leader of this hemisphere. The regionalists will probably think of the implications of the economic and defense arrangements with Canada in regional terms. But our economy is complementary with Canada, and Canadians have an immense stake, as has Argentina, in the markets of Europe. It would seem, therefore, that the strong links we are fashioning with Canada are rather to be thought of as buttressing the world power which is falling to the United States as a matter of destiny. As for Canada, she has long shown her eagerness to swim in our orbit, provided that the orbit is not exclusively regional. It is one of the odd circumstances of this war, indeed, that her direct participation as a belligerent in World War II has increased rather than diminished this orientation.

Now And Then

Preparations for launching the Government's campaign to sell defense bonds to the public are now under way and sales are scheduled to begin May 1. Secretary Morgenthau has repeatedly stated that the ballyhoo methods employed during World War I to induce the people to purchase bonds will not be repeated. That is a most welcome assurance. In their zeal to push Liberty Bond sales during the last war, some patriotic but misguided citizens resorted to pressure tactics that savored of downright intimidation. However, the mistakes made a quarter of a century ago were partly excusable because of inexperience. At that time the Government securities market was of little importance; it really came into being when it became necessary to finance the huge deficits of the war period.

The Treasury starts its present campaign to sell defense bonds to the people under very different and much more favorable auspices. Not only will it be dealing with a public that is more investment-conscious — albeit somewhat disillusioned—than the public that was importuned to buy Libefty bonds. The Treasury itself is better equipped to undertake the task ahead. For the past six years, it has been handling savings bonds, or "baby" bonds, especially designed to meet the needs of small investors. These bonds, like the new defense bonds of the series "E" class, which will supersede them, sell on a discount basis, are nontransferable, and, if held for ten years, yield approximately 2.9 per cent. There are now approximately $3,500,000,000 of these bonds outstanding. Their growing popularity is attested by the fact that during the past fiscal year about 4,700,000 separate bonds have been sold of denominations ranging from $25 to $1,000. These sales have not required any elaborate promotional campaign, though the Treasury's advertising material has been both attractive and informative. The combined stimulus of greater publicity and appeals to patriotism should make the new defense bonds bring much larger sums into the Treasury than have the savings bonds. By buying a bond every American citizen will, as the Treasury has pointed out, help to meet the national defense bill as well as to build up his personal investments.

Pressure On Vichy

Hitler's bait to Petain to resume French-German "collaboration" and begin negotiations for a permanent peace treaty provided Laval returns to the French government puts the food problem of France in its proper light. According to Vichy reports, the Fuehrer is willing to recognize the integrity of the French Empire except for former German colonies and the navy; to reduce the daily cost of maintaining the German army of occupation from 400,000,000 to 196,000,000 francs a day; to ease the boundary control between occupied and unoccupied France; to bring about an exchange of food and raw materials to help overcome France's famine; and to allow a partial readjustment of the frontiers of Alsace and Lorraine in France's favor. Such an offer makes it very clear that the food shortage in unoccupied France is entirely within Germany's power to correct, if she is disposed to do so. The fact that she is using that shortage as an instrument with which to pry concessions from Vichy indicates that the realities of the French food situation are very different from those which are circulated by our misguided humanitarians.

Vichy's position has steadily disintegrated under the constant pressure of Berlin. Unoccupied France, like occupied France, has been and continues to be looted by the Reich, though the method employed in the case of France is disguised by means of heavy exactions to pay the cost of the army of occupation, whereas in the case of the occupied France the requisitioning is open and direct. Yet the evolving campaign in Europe requires Hitler to be an Oliver Twist, and, moreover, necessitates a Quisling like Laval to keep up the handouts. The initial "peace," however, should be fairly all-satisfying to the Nazis. In German hands French North and West Africa would have considerable value to the Reich. In view of the disasters which have befallen the Italian fleet, Hitler would also find the French naval force most useful. And with France so placed in the German camp, Germany would also be enabled to send troops across the soil of unoccupied territory into Spain for an assault on Gibraltar. As for the concessions which Hitler is offering Petain in return for these aids, it is hardly necessary to say that they would be little more than Indian gifts, to be taken back with interest after having been given.

There can be no assurance, however, that the Vichy government will see Hitler's game for what it is. The aged marshal may have his doubts, but some of the men in his immediate entourage, notably Admiral Darlan, have moved so far in the direction of "collaborating" with Germany already that a further step forward may not seem like much. The answer to the question whether the Vichy regime will walk into the tempting trap which Hitler has prepared for them may depend, therefore, on how powerful this group of Naziphiles and Anglophobes has become.

Obsolete Nerves

Surgeons in Chicago have succeeded in removing the sympathetic nervous system from human beings. The time might come when the world in general will look with favor on this drastic operation, which reduces the blood pressure and calms the viscera. For the secondary telephonic organization of our inwards plays a part in the effect of emotions and tension on such organs as the heart and stomach. And when we get excited, the sympathetic nerves contract the blood vessels, increase blood pressure, and otherwise prepare us for emergency. But we can't go around perpetually contracting our blood vessels and carrying our hearts in our throats without serious consequences. Look what's happening in Britain. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. reports that "to some extent, the nervous strain on London's population has been reflected in the appreciable rise in mortality from ulcers of the stomach and duodenum." Maybe, at this rate, the nervous system will become as obsolete as the appendix —without need of an operation.

EARLIEST OF SNOWS

The April bloom perceives the first
Autumnal worm of pain.
The mole, when seeds begin to burst,
Assails the root again.

When from the bough the robin calls
By lanes where lovers walk,
Along the land, obliquely, falls
The shadow of the hawk.

The rabbit leaves the parent side,
Which way the huntsman knows,
When petals down the pear tree glide,
The earliest of snows.

"Fuss" Over Draftees

I can appreciate Corporal W. C. W's. gripe about all the attention being paid today's draftees in the Roosevelt fighting forces, but I think it can be shown he exaggerates if comparisons are made with World War days.

The same over-solicitude was evident at that time, as reference to old newspaper files will show. What the home folks were going to do for Joe Dogface was widely played up, drives were held to raise millions and Y huts were scattered all over the dry plains. The idea of all this was to make the converted civilian lads feel at home. Old timers watched these demonstrations with disgust (as is being done today) and declared their conviction that the Army was being turned into a pack of Willie boys of no value in a war.

Home folks used to grab a rattler and pop in on Joey on Sunday, to find him walking post, battling pans, doing time in the guardhouse or even some humbler task and anything but delighted at the thoughtfulness of the dear folks.

After 3 or 4 months the civilian began to drop off Joe. He went into town only seldom. The only way to get him to the huts to enjoy the entertainment supplied him was to march the outfit in formation. And before long the very word welfarer became a laugh, and in France a term of open derision. The A. E. F. veteran found his pleasures in ways not devised or foreseen by welfare planners or provided in regulations.

The protest against all the solicitude came from the soldier himself—when he became a soldier. He got tired of the fuss being made over him and ended by vetoing it.

The average draftee is going to be kept going about as steadily as his World War counterpart. All the babying will rouse a definite reaction (unless the present generation has softened inconceivably) and he'll rate bunk fatigue above demonstrations of concern for his welfare.

War Debts Again

I have just read the letter from Miss Salter, commenting on different attitudes toward debt. I wish she would look at the other side of the question she has brought up, i. e.,—why, if England and France were so insistent upon reparation payment by Germany after the last war, didn't they pay, or at least try to pay, their own war debts and set a good example? Situations like that should work both ways. Surely the beaten people of Germany were in just as bad a situation as the victorious people of England and France in trying to pay a debt. Isn't it true that the victorious are in a better condition after a battle than the vanquished? I am not pro anything but pro-American so can look at both sides without prejudice. It appears to have been the Allies' slogan that it is "not as we do, but as we say."

I suppose all this comes from a question of our place in the world scheme of things. We should have learned from the last war experience, but apparently did not, and anyway where did we get the idea that we are so important that it is our function to take care of the whole world? No one but us has any such idea as to the importance, but some like to make us believe they think so when it comes to getting assistance from us to save their skins.

Defense Motivation

The other day a lady lecturer regaled our club with first-hand accounts of the horrors of Europe and Nazism and ended on the passionate note, "You better get busy!" But she failed to make her point—why? Her omission is characteristic of 99 per cent of all defense pleadings. Yet President Roosevelt comments on our unawareness of danger.

Those of us who do not choose to act from emotion alone always want to know "Why?" We are not all historians. We have not all read "Mein Kampf," nor would we know whether or not to believe it if we did. We do think of Europe as always at war. We hear word-of-mouth rumors about Hitler wanting to become god of the earth or something, which doesn't sound feasible, and because Europe is suffering, we, too, are supposed to turn blue with fear of him. There are two diametrically opposed schools of thought, both pro-American, about what position America should take in this war, and mostly people differ according to which newspapers they read. More light on the facts should make this unnecessary and therefore unify us. Why do not those who try to motivate us complete their arguments more often with a brief analysis and history of Germany's ambition for world domination if that's what they are inferring, direct quotations of Hitler's threats toward us and explanations of how he could carry them out? Tell us "Why" more often and we'll get a hustle on!

Of American Optimism And Defeatism In Viewing War

Editorial comment on the current world revolution, the topic of prime importance in the daily news and presumable public interest, continues to be more amusing that instructively clarifying.

One cannot remain genuinely patriotic and, at the same time, survey disinterestedly the extraordinary but, from any fair-minded and intelligent point of view, foreseeable succession of military and diplomatic events of the last weeks. But for responsible newspapers to continue to review these events from a consistently biased and prejudicial angle is certainly not sound journalism as distinguished from circulation-mongering newspaperism. The public greatly needs and could profit by something wiser and finer in editorial commentary.

Whenever, as for example in North Africa and Greece-Yugoslavia, emphatic evidences of German brains and substance are inescapable, from any viewpoint, fair or prejudiced, the almost universal editorial reference to events, as they unfold favorably to the Axis, is "unexpected," while editorial ingenuity is exercised in burrowing for explanations in every conceivable field except in the obvious and repeatedly demonstrated causes to be recognized in German ingenuity, endurance, resourceful coordination and straight courage—in a word, military efficiency of the highest order exercised against every kind of terrain and every device of British opposition. Why, in the simple interest of truth—why "unexpected?"

If we look over the year and a half of this Second World War, mere candor must reveal that the Germans have not only consistently outfought their opponents, they have in every instance outthought them. Therefore too much of the supposedly qualified commentary in the United States has consistently found every German victory, in an amazing series of strategical and tactical coups, "unexpected" from Poland to Vichy and carrying on now through the blitzkrieg campaign in the Mediterranean area. Gamelin, behind his "impregnable" Maginot line, was complacent until the "unexpected" hit him and mentally, as well as physically, unprepared France.

Behind similar mental "Maginot lines" public opinion in these only partially United States is fooling with national defense while newspaper commentary continues to soothe the public with popular wishful thinking. Whenever a true prophet has the hardihood, like the patriotic Lindberghs, to speak the unpopular truth, vilification is his reward. Has not the hour come for public opinion to be made aware of realities? With the drastic lessons of other complacent "democracies" vividly before us, has not the hour long passed for immature, unreasoning, prejudicial thinking? And is it not today the vitally primary function of editorial responsibility to do its part in guiding public thought towards a just appreciation of actual values, no matter how unwelcome or how unpopular such values, for the moment, may be?

Just as truly and prophetically as the handwriting on Nebuchadnezzer's palace walls, warnings are being written from day to day on the edifices of this money-drunk generation in a New but wiser World. Neither national integrity nor national safety can be won merely by plastering the landscape with billions of money. This thing that we call "national defense," crippled by selfish and sectional interests, lack of self-sacrificing coordination, and general befuddlement, is neither national nor can it be called in an adequate sense a defense.

Where does one find any evidence of mental preparedness? Let us hope that, amid the millions of Easter supplications, some devout prayers went up for guidance "to the God of things as they are."

GEORGE MARVIN.
Charlottesville, Va., April 18.

Capitalizing the dismay created by the Nazi advances in the Eastern Mediterranean, Col. Lindbergh tried again at Chicago to persuade the American people that all is lost on the other side of our Atlantic frontier, and that Britain, despite the aid we have promised, cannot win the war. This defeatist view is directly opposite to the judgment of our highest political, naval and military officers, who have experience and information Lindbergh does not possess. Today, when our country is committed to give Britain and her Allies the tools of victory, this defeatist view is subversive of our national policy and our national security.

Not limiting himself to preaching defeatism, Lindbergh advocates action which would destroy for all time the historic Atlantic security of the United States. For that would be the result of heeding his call to stop sending most of our modern fighting planes overseas for the active defense of our Atlantic frontier, as a moment's objective analysis will show.

What we need now, in the face of the grave but localized disasters which have befallen the Allies, is not defeatism. We need the resolution we have shown in other crises of our history. We need determination to produce what is necessary, and to take any steps that are necessary to safeguard our national security and the American way of life. These objectives can only be gained now by Allied victory, as the American people have overwhelmingly decided.

The Post Impressionist

Capital Springs

If the Capital of the United States had remained where it started to be, Philadelphia in spring might be as beautiful as Washington; but one who has lived through several springs in each town cannot help noting the actual differences at the season when Washington is most beautiful.

In the country's first Capital, for example you have to go a considerable distance from the center of town in order to see flowers in bloom, except in florists' displays, and there are some residents who apparently never see them growing at all, except in pathetically tended window boxes. This is especially so for those who live in the oldest sections of the city—and do not belong to the top or even the lower middle class of income earners. Nothing uplifts their hearts with sudden beauty as they pass the gardens of the hotels, or carefully nurtured public squares and resting places, such as are everywhere in downtown Washington; for they do not find such things. A little grass, a few carefully protected trees, occasionally a monument or historical marker, and the forms of policemen, there to see that the grass is not walked on, and that benches are not moved or abused, are the signature of spring in Philadelphia.

There are two spots that are different, in relation to the central part of the city. But they are not easily accessible to those with routine duties and restricted budgets. And it is only because they are out of the ordinary in Philadelphia that they have a kind of fame. These are Rittenhouse Square, which is hemmed in by the residences, clubs, and apartment houses of the wealthy; and Fairmount Park, which is Philadelphia's concession to the woodsy character of Penn's original town. Yet the park is at some distance from the sections that were settled earliest.

In Washington, on the other hand, it is difficult to fix upon any one thing or location that sums up the beauty of the town in spring, unless it is the emphasis that is put on cherry blossoms. Even this emphasis seems to many to be out of proportion, because they know of the suddenly come upon beauty that is to be found in ordinary residence streets, in the city's squares, yards, and along the Mall and parkways . . . where magnolias of more than one variety, forsythia, dogwood, and a succession of flowers that only a botanist could enumerate fill the air with fragrance and delight the eye with their form and color.

And in the ear linger the songs of birds which are lured here by the flowers and trees, as are the tourists who crowd the streets, and jam the traffic lanes, so that not 10 minutes from anywhere you could hear the song of the cardinal.

It is easier to sum up Philadelphia in the spring. One incident that does so for me has lingered in memory for several years. It occurred in the exact part of the city that owes its distinction to individuals and events connected with the years when Philadelphia was the Capital of the Nation, and Washington had not come into existence. And it was perhaps with metaphorical significance, in a graveyard.

It happened in a graveyard, because it was in such a spot that I found myself one noon when the call of spring was in my blood, and I had taken a long time away from my office, ostensibly for lunch, in order to stroll the streets and to discover what signs of spring I could. The greenery in St. Peter's Churchyard at Third and Pine Streets had caught my attention.

I had not been there long before two boys about 7 or 8 years old came into the place, their quietness contrasting with the yells and catcalls of youngsters who were playing on the paving blocks outside. They wandered about almost on tiptoe for several minutes, veering always in one certain direction, before one of them, thinking perhaps that I had some authority there, came up to me.

"Mister," he said, "can we pick the flower?"

I must have looked puzzled, because up to this time I had seen no flower.

"There's one over there," the other said excitedly, pointing to a spot behind a pyramidal gravestone of the late eighteenth century.

When we got back to the path, carrying the bright yellow flower, there stood the sexton.

"Thank you," the boys said to me hastily.

"You're welcome," I answered. Then I looked at the sexton, wondering exactly how to get out of the predicament.

"It's pathetic, isn't it?" I said with affected easiness . . . "we were careful, of course, not to walk on the graves."

The sexton almost smiled. "People like the green grass," he commented, "but we don't like them to walk on it."

As he hesitated, I strolled nonchalantly toward the gate. The boys had gone through it at once and in haste.

The sexton walked by my side, and as we reached the sidewalk he did actually smile. For we saw, far off down Third Street, the boys running rapidly away with their floral evidence of spring in the Nation's first Capital—a single, perfect flower of that ordinarily ubiquitous weed, the dandelion.

Words For Our Time

Warnings From George Washington

IN APPRECIATION of the fact that time was the very essence of the situation during the debate in the Senate over the lend-lease bill, many statements that were, to use a mild expression, misleading were allowed to go unchallenged. Now, however, that several members of the minority group are taking the issue to the people, not a few of their utterances demand closer scrutiny and in some instances flat contradiction.

The solemn words of the Great Pilot, under whose skillful guidance our Ship of State weathered the world storm which beset it in circumstances which are comparable to the dangers which menace us today, should not be lightly dismissed, much less garbled through carelessness, ignorance, or as I fear more often, by wishful thinking. Senator Clark was in grievous error when he charged President Roosevelt with "reversing the policies of Washington." On the contrary he is implementing and executing them with the approval of the great majority of Congress and with the almost unanimous support of the people of the United States. The senior Senator from Montana denounced Mr. Ickes, Mr. Jesse Jones and many other patriotic citizens for their attitude and said, "As for myself I prefer to follow Washington." Truly a wise decision, but unhappily, through "free-wheeling" of the most reckless character the Senator has strayed from the path he would follow and with regard to our approved national policy, he is pursuing a course which, in strikingly similar circumstances of international stress, Washington characterized as "diabolical." Let us examine the record.

IN HIS ADDRESS to both Houses of Congress on December 3, 1793, President Washington said:

"As soon as the war in Europe had embraced those powers with whom the United States have the most extensive relations, there was reason to apprehend that our intercourse with them might be interrupted and our disposition for peace drawn into question by the suspicions too often entertained by belligerent nations.

"I cannot recommend to your notice measures for the fulfillment of our duties to the rest of the world without again pressing upon you the necessity of placing ourselves in a condition of complete defence and of exacting from them the fulfillment of their duties toward us."

IN ADDRESSING his "fellow citizens of the Senate and the House" on January 8, 1790, Washington said:

"Among the many interesting objects which will engage your attention, that of providing for the common defence will merit particular regard. To be prepared for war is one of the most effective means of preserving peace. A free people ought not only to be armed, but disciplined; to which end a uniform and well digested plan is requisite; and their safety and interest require, that they should promote such manufactories as tend to render them independent of others for essential, particularly for military, supplies . . ."

"Knowledge is in every country the surest basis of public happiness. In one, in which the measures of government receive their impression so immediately from the sense of the community, as in ours, it is proportionably essential. To the security of a free constitution it contributes in various ways; by convincing those who are intrusted with the public administration, that every valuable end of government is best answered by the enlightened confidence of the people; and by teaching the people themselves to know, and to value their own rights; to discern and provide against invasions of them; to distinguish between oppression and the necessary exercise of lawful authority, between burthens proceeding from a disregard to their convenience and those resulting from the inevitable exigencies of society, to discriminate the spirit of liberty from that of licentiousness, cherishing the first, avoiding the last and uniting a speedy but temperate vigilance against encroachments, with an inviolable respect to the laws."

WRITING TO President John Adams from Mount Vernon on July 4, 1798, Washington said:

"At the epoch of my retirement an invasion of these States by an European power, or even the probability of such an event happening in my days, was so far from being contemplated by me that I had no conception that that or any other ocurrence would arise in so short a period, which would turn my eyes from the shades of Mount Vernon . . . In case of actual invasion by a formidable force, I certainly would not intrench myself under the cover of age and retirement, if my services should be required by my country to assist in repelling it. And if there be good cause, which must be better known to the Government than to private citizens, to expect such an event, delay in preparing for it might be dangerous, improper, and not to be justified by prudence."

Without waiting to learn his wishes, on July 2 (1798), President Adams sent the following nomination to the Senate, where it was unanimously confirmed, "George Washington, of Mount Vernon, to be lieutenant-general and commander-in-chief of all the armies raised and to be raised in the United States."

NOT THE LEAST applicable to the present situation are the lines that Washington sent Henry Lee, Governor of Virginia, upon receiving the Governor's congratulations on what he had done for "the peace and happiness of this country." This letter was written in Philadelphia and is dated July 21, 1793:

". . . But were the case otherwise, I should not be less inclined to know the sense of the people upon every matter of great public concern; for, as I have no wish superior to that of promoting the happiness and welfare of this country, so, consequently it is only for me to know the means to accomplish the end, if it be within the compass of my powers."

"That there are in this as well as in other countries, discontented characters, I well know; as also that these characters are actuated by very different views; some good, from an opinion that the measures of the general government are impure; some bad, and, if I might be allowed to use so harsh an expression, diabolical, inasmuch as they are not only meant to impede the measures of that government generally, but more especially (as a great mean toward the accomplishment of it) to destroy the confidence which it is necessary for the people to place (until they have unequivocal proof of demerit) in their public servants."

WRITING at this time (January 20, 1799) to his neighbor Lord Fairfax, Washington denounced the "open violations of Treaties and the laws of Nations that were taking place." He adds:

"But by the adoption of vigorous measures for self-defense the People with one voice have made a tender of their lives and fortunes to repel any attempts which may be made on the Constitution or the Government of their Country . . . Nothwithstanding the Spirit of the People is so animated that party amongst us who have been uniform in their opposition to all measures of Government . . . hang upon and clog its wheels as much as in them lye and, with a rancor and virulence which is scarcely to be conceived . . . I have always believed and trusted that Providence which has carried us through a long and painful war with one of the most powerful nations in Europe will not suffer the discontented among ourselves to produce more than a temporary interruption to the permanent Peace and Happiness of this rising Empire."

CAN IT BE denied that the Axis powers in proclaiming their New Order over Europe, Asia and Africa declared open warfare upon the United States and the ideals we stand for? True, by at least unofficial spokesmen of the dictators, we were assured that the American continent was to be graciously excluded from the domain of the New Crusade, but can this promise of exceptional treatment be more confidently relied on than the non-aggression treaties or the security pacts that were so recently negotiated to safeguard the independence and the liberties of the many countries of Europe that now lie in appalling devastation under the iron heel of the ruthless conquerors? President Roosevelt is a thousand times right when he calls upon our people to awaken to their perilous situation. It is later, much later, than many think.

Capital Parade

1,700 Miles Away

ONE OF THE GRAVER decisions of American war policy is soon to be made—whether or no to exert the influence of this country to keep French North Africa out of the Axis orbit. The preliminary negotiations between British representatives and State Department officials acquainted with the French situation were completed some days ago, and the decision is now up to the President and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. If the decision is to have a crack at it, several important steps will be taken.

Tea and sugar, longed for by the Arabs, and other foodstuffs needed by the French, oil and certain other industrial supplies will be made regularly available to Marshal Weygand's regime. An American control commission will be sent into the French North African provinces, ostensibly to supervise the distribution of the supplies, but actually with the additional purpose of carrying on counter-propaganda against the large and active German "armistice" commission, which happens to include the German military intelligence's entire Arab department. Possibly a number of vessels from the American Atlantic Fleet will be sent to Casa Blanca on a courtesy visit, and allowed to remain there as a standing reminder that other nations exist besides Germany.

THE TIME LEFT for the decision is very short. The Weygand regime, already weakened by prolonged German pressure, must have been shaken to its foundations by the appearance of a strong German force in Libya and by the attack on the English in Egypt. The balance of power on the African coast has obviously been drastically altered.

Meanwhile German pressure has also increased noticeably. For example, large numbers of German agents have appeared at Casa Blanca—on the Atlantic, it should be remembered—and are now engaged in their usual pursuits of checking military supplies and emplacements, investigating raw material resources, intriguing with the less loyal French officials and bribing the natives. Unless strong measures are quickly taken, the opportunity may pass. If the opportunity passes and French North Africa falls into German hands, then it will not be long before Dakar goes too. Dakar is only 1,700 miles by air from the bulge of Brazil, where an air base is being built by the Brazilians but has not yet been opened to us by the German-infiltrated Brazilian army. And with Dakar in German hands, British convoys from the Far East will hardly be able to use the South Atlantic.

FURTHERMORE, the situation has now reached a stage at which only strong measures have much chance of success. Five months ago, mere sending of foodstuffs and other supplies and appointment of an American control commission might have been enough to halt the degenerative process. Now, however, the naval courtesy visit is probably essential, and it is not sure that even so daring a step as that will insure final success.

What the President's decision may be, no one can tell. Pending the decision, however, it is interesting to study British-American policy in North Africa and the Western Mediterranean as a sort of parable of the idiocies that have been committed in this war. Both nations are at fault.

On the one hand, through the extremely acute young official of the ministry of economic warfare who has come to this country to negotiate the North African problem, the British long ago made an arrangement to bolster the Spanish will to peace. Paying bribes to the Franco regime is not a pleasant business, but thus far at least, in the opinion of everyone really informed on the subject, the arrangement has worked.

It was originally the State Department's plan to join with the British in this arrangement, but the clamor of American leftists, whose reaction was an almost purely emotional survival from the time of the Spanish civil war, frightened the department into changing its mind.

If this was foolish, the behavior of the British toward Vichy and French North Africa betrayed the same sort of stupid indecision. Here the United States was in the position of proposing bribes. Certain elements in the British government, notably at the foreign office, understood our purpose. But at the ministry of economic warfare, anything offered to the French was regarded as an outrage. There was good reason for this, just as there was good reason for the American leftists' reaction to the bribery of Spain. In many things, Vichy's policy is undoubtedly dictated from Weisbaden, where the main German armistice commission sits. British military secrets, such as the antisubmarine detection device, have been handed to the Germans by the French. Minor French officials abroad have been disciplined on the motion of their German colleagues. And Admiral Darlan has given every evidence of a will to be subservient.

BUT ON THE two big questions—the disposal of the French fleet and the disposal of the colonies—Marshal Petain has so far stood firm. The object of the American policy has been to support him in his firmness. So far as the North African colonies are concerned, the Ministry of Economic Warfare has apparently been brought around by the young official above mentioned. It is to be hoped that now a coherent policy for the entire western Mediterranean may be worked out. Certainly it should be, for the questions deeply concern this country as well as Britain. The loss of Dakar to the Germans will be a direct threat to the United States of the most serious dimensions. Under the circumstances, besides intelligent cooperation with the British, the utmost of American boldness seems called for.

Post-War Thoughts

By David Wills

Of England And Her People After War

"WE CAN'T GO back to the old ways of life before the war." That belief I met all over England. It's on record daily in the conservative Times, the liberal News-Chronicle, the labor Daily Herald, though there's no fierce argument, because everyone agrees that unless the war is won, nobody's views will amount to anything. But there's much quiet thinking, and it's probing deeper than into political forms and slogans. For the war has proved the bankruptcy of fascism and communism, which during the past generation of apathy in England had a fringe of influence beyond the strict limits of party membership. The war threw English thought back on its own resources and failings.

It was no good blaming past faults on individuals like "Do-Nothing" Baldwin, the pig and pipe squire—who hated pigs; MacDonald, the sentimental labor leader, kissed by all the duchesses; Chamberlain, the tolerable mayor of Birmingham in a lean year, who mistook sincere stubborn ignorance for profound wisdom; Simon, whose mind left no room for soul, who had no blood to boil. For these men were kept in office by a substantial majority of British voters whose desires they accurately reflected.

DURING THE past generation a blight of apathy and dulled vigor spread over England and could not be shaken off, because everywhere the road was closed against reinvigoration from new men rising from the ranks. Phoenix had lost the art of being reborn from the ashes.

Some limited their awareness to lament for the lost generation of the last war. But instead of overcoming that tragedy by advancing new men, the old men closed their ranks and clung stubbornly to their powers and wrote an even greater tragedy. Many with whom I talked felt that there could be no specific reforms unless first there was a reborn faith in democracy, a realization that the great heritage of England demands fulfillment of unfinished work, not blind clinging to the past—a heritage of obligation, not of privilege. ". . . a nation . . . dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal . . . It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced . . . we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain . . . that this Nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom . . ." Lincoln challenges the best of English democratic thought as well as of American.

IF THAT FAITH is reborn in England, it will call imperatively for an educational system based on democracy and not as in the past on separation of social classes. There's no place in a democratic world for council schools for working class boys, secondary schools for middle class, exclusive private (miscalled public) schools for upper class. The sin of segregation is not atoned for by enabling a few to filter through the barriers. Still less is there place for the timidity, restricted outlook and lack of perspective that ran through all schools.

But of what use to shape the educational system so that a boy of ability gets the best possible training regardless of his origins or wealth, if there is no opportunity for him as a man to use his abilities. The English industrial and commercial system for decades has been congealing around monopoly. Under the slogan "Self Government for Industry," government powers of compulsion, taxation and making tariffs have been freely delegated to industry after industry in England to build up monopolies which stamp out new enterprise. The past generations of self-made men destroyed their own system by endowing their heirs with wealth which bred monopoly instead of enterprise.

That monopolistic tendency was shared by trade unions as well as owners of industry. Between the monopolistic millstones of trade associations and trade unions, the spirit of enterprise and youth was ground pretty small.

POLITICAL LIFE was still more tightly closed against invasion by the new and vigorous, because none could afford to enter Parliament unless he had private means both to support himself and contribute freely to the constituency that adopted him as a Conservative candidate, or was a member of the Labor Party with a paid trade union job to supplement his meager Parliamentary salary. Party machines frowned on independence of mind. And, sitting atop the House of Commons, was a vast weight of hereditary privilege in the House of Lords.

Timidity in political leaders promoted timidity in civil servants, who were trained never to show initiative, and still found it noteworthy that way back in the nineteenth century they became honest. The upper ranks of the civil service were the most stubborn refuge of the monopolistic "old school tie" tradition.

What prospect is there that democratic faith will be reborn, will lead to a revitalizing of all activities by opening up the channels through which new men can bring their fresh zeal?

THIS WAR, like the last, is smashing into the life of civilian England, breaking down barriers, throwing together people whose lives before had rarely mixed. In some this has produced irritation, in most a greater sense of common humanity.

Ownership and control of business is little changed by the war, but government restrictions are necessarily severe and tend to promote monopoly. In the tremendously expanded work of government administration, many new and vigorous people of independent mind are meeting politicians and civil servants, learning their merits and weaknesses. These new men may play great parts in the post-war reorganization of England.

The political field remains the most stagnant. The war added the monopolies of labor to those of conservatism in the government. The only great political figure is Winston Churchill, and he is still surrounded by many of the politicians who so strenuously opposed him in the past and have been dominant in politics for the last generation. A war-time political truce freezes parliamentary representation in its prewar state, so that new men can be brought into the government only on the initiative of those who would be replaced.

SOME OF THE people who believe in the need for democratic renovation of England hold that the persistence in office of these old-time politicians is not very important, because they, too, are sincerely doing their best to win the war. After the war, the future will be determined by the people of England, and the present politicians will vanish overnight.

But others protest that the outside world judges England by the politicians and diplomats with whom it comes into contact, that it does not know the common man, though it admires and respects his present courage. They say that a revitalization of political and diplomatic life would show the world Britain's desire for democratic rebirth and would be itself a powerful weapon in winning the war. But only Winston Churchill has sufficient political power to accept and implement that argument, and he hasn't acted.

This argument is not put forward by one party against another, by one man against another. For the real struggle in England is between courageous enterprise and timid conservatism in every man's mind. True, different people feel the challenge in different degrees. But the question is whether energetic men of faith will be able to overthrow conservatism in their own minds throughout the Conservative Party, Liberal and Labor Parties, trade unions, schools, business, and every aspect of society.

THERE ARE MANY signs that this spiritual battle will be fought to victory. It is the evidence of that trend to victory that has compelled admiration for English resistance. But the war may be long, courage may weary, vitality may be sapped. It is my belief that England may find reserves of strength then through the continuation of that penetration of English thought by the ideals of American democracy which has been proceeding for half a century, though few Americans realize how large a part their own achievements have played in the life and thought of England, how stirring is the appeal of their own prophets.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Garden Appeaser

Some people yearn for conquests;
Vast power is their yen;
Too many think of prestige
No matter where or when;
Some people want more outlets—
Some strive for mighty deeds,
But in this vernal season
I go for garden seeds.

Some men are concentrating
About this time of year
On super tanks and Stukas
To fill a world with fear;
Some people fight for bases
With all their might and brawn,
But I keep very busy
Developing a lawn!

A lot of persons worry
About this order new;
Too many bend o'er war maps
With thumbtacks green and blue;
Some people thump on tables
And treat the weak as fools . . .
I stage my only blitzkrieg
With brand-new garden tools.

This planet's sick and weary
As slaughter rules the day,
With April full of worries
And more on tap for May;
Some folks seek only carnage—
They've ants within their pants;
But I am far too busy
With young tomato plants.

Some people want expansion.
They seek to crush and spoil;
(Excuse me just a minute—
I must spade up this soil);
Some strive to join an axis
While many more do not . . .
I only want some bushes
For my suburban plot.

Some folks they live in headlines
And seek war details grim;
(You'll pardon me a moment—
This shrub I've got to trim);
Some people storm a hillside
While others bomb a bay;
(The bugs are in my roses—
I've got to buy a spray).

Some people wade thru treaties
And ultimatums rough;
They read each speech or listen
To broadcasts pretty gruff;
For all such information
They are the keenest hogs,
But I've one form of reading—
The spring seed catalogues!

This world is full of headaches—
A new one comes each morn;
(Mine's caused by news of hedgehogs
Where I would plant my corn);
Each day there comes a problem
To tax the nerve and brain . . .
Mine's how to tote a mower
Home on a crowded train.

All those treaties being signed over in Europe and Asia have zippers on 'em to make quick changes possible.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Col. Lindbergh Vs. Hitler

A DAY OR TWO after Col. Lindbergh had announced that Britain is defeated and the war practically over, Hitler in his birthday proclamation to the German people announced that "a heavy year of conflict stands before us" in which "historic decisions of a unique scale will be made" entailing "immeasurable demands once again" on "our menfolk, our people of the German homeland." In the difference between these two estimates of what lies ahead there is all the difference between those who, like Col. Lindbergh, have never understood this war, and those who, like Hitler himself or his great antagonists—Churchill and Roosevelt—actually do understand this war.

LIPPMANN

For while superficially Col. Lindbergh and Hitler seem to agree, in that both expect a German victory, Hitler knows what Col. Lindbergh does not realize—that if there is to be a German victory, it can be won only on a "unique scale" after a prolonged and very costly conflict. What does Hitler mean when he says that he must win the war on a unique scale? He means that he cannot win the war on the small scale of his European victories, that if he is to win the war he must win it on a world scale. That is why, unlike Col. Lindbergh, he does not think the war is over and that is why, in spite of his Balkan victories, he tells the German people to steel themselves for a heavy year of conflict.

THE WHOLE OF Col. Lindbergh's misunderstanding of the war has arisen from two contradictory ideas—the one is that this is just another "European war" among European great powers in which the German Empire will defeat the British Empire and then take over some British colonies; the other is that Naziism, Fascism, and Communism are the wave of the future, destined to sweep Europe but not to cross the Atlantic Ocean. Hitler knows better. He knows that the revolutionary war he is waging cannot finally be won unless he not merely defeats all his opponents—which means that he must win not merely a European but a world war—but unless also by revolution he transforms his enemies into his more or less willing allies. Only by defeating all his opponents can he hope to make any of them his more or less willing allies. That is why Hitler realizes that he has no victory and that the conflict will go on to a decision on "a unique scale."

The scale of his war is unique, because as long as there are free countries which Hitler has not conquered, the nations he has conquered will continue to resist him, will conspire to defeat him, will regard as traitors those public men who work for him and with him. Thus he has defeated France, but the defeat cannot be made to stick unless by defeating Britain and America, too, he can bring into power a French government and make a French social order which will police the French nation for him and hold it in vassalage. Hitler realizes equally well, what Col. Lindbergh has never grasped, that to defeat Britain he must defeat the British Empire throughout the world, and so completely annihilate the hope of resurrection and liberation that Britain in Europe and overseas can be governed by British Lavals or British Quislings.

THE NAIVE VIEW of this war, which Col. Lindbergh expresses so forcefully, would have it that a Hitler victory and a British defeat would be in effect a mere reversal of 1918 when there was an Allied victory and a German defeat. That is what leads the colonel and his patriotic followers to take such a detached and indifferent view of the outcome—to feel more or less that this is just one game in a long series of contests in which our favorite team won the last time, and the other team is winning this time.

Hitler has never, except when he was deliberately pulling the wool over some innocent visitor's eyes, pretended that this war could end, or that he meant to end it if he won, by his signing another peace treaty with his enemies. He has said, and what is much more important he has demonstrated by his actions, that his war can be victorious only if after defeating his enemies in the field he then captures them as peoples and makes them his allies, vassals, and agents.

WHAT HE REQUIRED of Yugoslavia, for example, was not merely that it adhere to the "New Order," but that it should become his ally in destroying the Greeks. If he conquers the Greeks on the mainland, he will press the Greeks to become his allies in despoiling the Turks, not merely to give up the idea of resisting, but in their turn to become his allies in the attack on the Middle East and Suez.

But the great example, which we shall fail to study at our extreme peril, is France—once the ally of Britain, then defeated, and then subjected to the cruelest pressure and also to the most insidious corruption in order to make France fight against Britain. No one need doubt the honorable intentions of Marshal Petain and Gen. Weygand. But only the dangerously naive will fail to realize that the Vichy government and its diplomatic missions abroad are infiltrated by Frenchmen who have staked their careers and their very lives on a Nazi victory. And only the blind will fail to see that what is in the making, if things go very badly with the British in the Mediterranean, is in some form or other the capture of the French Empire for the use of the Nazis in cutting the North Atlantic from the South Atlantic and forcing the more southerly American republics into the orbit of Germany.

BUT THAT IS only part of the "unique scale" of the war. When Col. Lindbergh speaks so easily of a British defeat, he should study France today if he wishes seriously to comprehend what in fact Hitler would necessarily try to do with Britain if British resistance were overcome. Just as Hitler is forcing the French, though they still resist him because the British resist, to "collaborate" with him—that is to help him win the war—so if he conquered the British Isles, he would use starvation and all manner of systematic oppression to force the British to submit to traitors and renegades who would help him to win his final campaign for the mastery of the world.

For until he has the mastery of the world in the sense that no one can oppose him or challenge him and there is no hope of liberation, none of his conquests can be maintained except by permanent occupation of more and more territory.

DID COL. LINDBERGH realize that to be defeated by Hitler is not merely to give up something and then return to the ordinary ways of peace, did he realize that the defeated nations have to become Hitler's allies for further conquests, the colonel would never have advised the American people as he did the other night in Chicago. He told us that because in his opinion Britain is "defeated," American support of Britain should be stopped.

Col. Lindburgh cannot have realized what he was saying. For leaving aside the consideration of honor and good faith, though a great people can never leave it aside, the adoption of his advice would not merely give the stab in the back which insured the absolute and catastrophic defeat of Britain. We should then have earned the everlasting enmity of all the British peoples and of all the other peoples who care for honor and for liberty. We should by this supreme act of desertion not only have isolated ourselves strategically among our avowed enemies, but we should have made ourselves the objects of a universal hatred and contempt throughout the world. If anyone thinks that after that we would be regarded as good neighbors by Canada or by any American republic, he knows nothing of the history of nations and less about the nature of man.

"That will be the happiest day of my life," he said yesterday. "Democracy and freedom are not just words in this country, they are a living reality."

Fire— Driven by a 35-mile wind, forest fire spread yesterday to the exclusive Brant Rock, Mass., summer colony and destroyed approximately 500 homes with all furnishings before it burned to the ocean's edge. In this picture, more than 50 houses are burning. So intense was the heat the firemen and volunteers were able to make only feeble efforts to check the sweeping blaze. SANDBURG WITH HIS DAUGHTERS, HELGA AND JANET, PORTRAYED BY EDWARD STEICHEN IN 1922.

Carl Sandburg Featured Poet

This is Carl Sandburg:

A soldier of the Spanish-American War.

A newspaper reporter and now a columnist in The Post and other papers.

A biographer of Lincoln.

A writer of fairy tales and singer of songs.

The poet of those who work.

The friend of anyone who happens to be around.

His life and his work unroll in an exhibit which went on display at the Library of Congress yesterday. Thursday at 8:30 p. m. he will mount the platform of Coolidge Auditorium in the library with a "few pennyworth of dreams and a ragbag of unsalable ideas" like the Lincoln he described in "The Prairie Years."

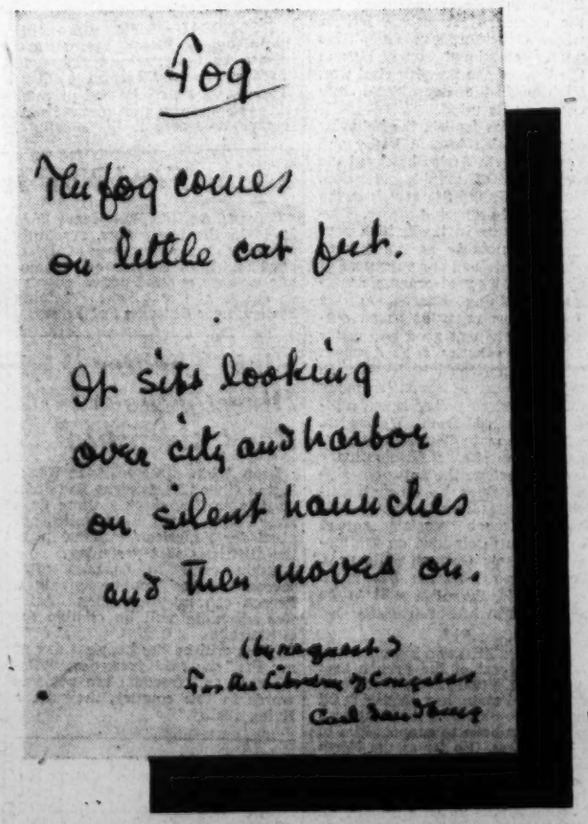
He is another speaker in the series of discussions on the role of the poet in a democracy which is sponsored by the library and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

In the series of photographs, volumes of prose and poetry, newspaper clippings and phonograph recordings of his voice in American ballads, Sandburg is revealed for those who pause.

The story of his life progresses toward the fixed point of his intent: to be a voice for his people.

He is seen at his confirmation in the Lutheran Church, and working in the city room of the Chicago Day Book. He is seen with his wife, Paula Steicken Sandburg, sister of the noted photographer, and with his children, Helga and Janet, hanging about his neck.

Sandburg is everywhere that other people are. And he is alone at work in the quiet of his home.



Fog

The fog comes on little cat feet.

It sits looking over city and harbor on silent haunches and then moves on.

Look who's here, the Cassowary!
In her Easter bonnet;
Isn't she the class? Oh, very!
She deserves a sonnet.

Fourteen lines—hm-m, what to say now?
Well, she's single-wattled;
Fast? Her foes learn with dismay how
She can get them bottled.

Legs are plump, like weiner sausage,
Wings are short and useless;
And she's, like her kin the ostrich,
Every bit as toothless.

And, if this will avail ya,
She comes from Australia.

Put Your Skin in The 'Pink' by Use Of Complexion Brush

Want your complexion in the pink for spring? It's all a matter of friction to achieve the "pink." Scrub your face soap-and-water clean and chances are you will have new skin radiance. A complexion brush is important ammunition for your "spring preparedness" beauty campaign.

The brush is a little egg-shaped brush with a handle made of shining, liquid clear plastice in four colors, crystal, ruby, sapphire and emerald. That means you can match your bathroom accessories. The brush is bristled with shining, silky white Prolon that's as gentle as can be to your skin, yet surprisingly firm in dealing with skin blemishes.

This brush used with a bowl of warm, soapy water scuffs off tough, winter-worn skin, dislodges pore cloggers and oily deposits that are loitering about. Alternate this treatment by combining the use of soap and water with cream. Cleanse the face with cream, remove soil, then apply another film of cream. Then scrub face with complexion brush, soap and water.

Silver Tea Paper, Fiber Rugs Give Cool Look To Rooms Being Outfitted in Summer Dress

Walls Have Icy Effect When Papered With Chinese Wrappings; Tufted Leather In Beeige Shade New Devorative Note

By Martha Ellyn
Post Household Editor

WHAT A UTOPIA this would be if we could all just pick up and leave our home tasks and desks to spend the hot months atop a snow-capped mountain. Most of us, however, must carry on with our duties and make the best of our year-round homes regardless of heat and humidity.

Martha Ellyn

But there's nothing to keep us from making our surroundings, cool-looking, gay and inviting. Giving the home a new summer dress that provides that "cool as a cucumber" look is quite possible because of the ingenuity of progressive home decorators.

China has given home decorators a material with which to achieve not only smartness, but that desired cool look. Silver tea paper used by the Chinese for wrapping tea so it will retain its flavor and be immune to moisture is now being used to cover walls. This paper comes in oblong pieces which are pasted on the wall in patches to give an antique effect. This soft gleaming paper makes an excellent background for fruitwood furniture. The icy appearance also affords a perfect background for furnishings of warm tones. A living room has been papered in this distinctively new material in the furniture gallery of a local department store.

Leather walls applied in a tufted manner are also a new decorative note. In the dining room of this furniture gallery, beige leather has been used on two walls of the dining room, contrasted by floral handmade paper on the other two walls. The beige leather repeats the same warm colors of the flowers decorating the wallpaper.

Manufacturers have also given us inexpensive fibre rugs in excellent designs and lovely true colors in place of the old grass summer rugs of by-gone days. They are easy to clean and feel cool under foot. Many of their patterns are reversible,—one reason why many families keep these rugs down the year-round, particularly in game recreation rooms, nurseries and such rooms.

These are but a few of the furnishings that are being shown by home furnishing departments to effect a delightful transformation in homes to make them cool and gay for summer.

Run Stopper Good To Have Along With Sheer Hose

The hose item on the budget is one that has to be considered seriously, for the beautiful cobwebby sheers are not entirely immune to snags and runs. One way to get the most from the hose budget is to carry a little tube of hose-saver in your bag. Its name is Run-R-Stop, and it is truly an aid to every woman who's had the annoyance of sprouting a run in her hose, either in a public place or at home when dressing against time.

To apply this quick-drying, convenient preventive, just squeeze a drop on the damaged spot. If it's a run, seal the ends with the fluid; if it's a snag, be sure to catch all the loose threads.

Tests have shown that Run-R-Stop is just as effective on nylons as on silks, and it is harmless to fabrics. One application lasts the life of the hose, for it won't wash out. It is available at almost all drug, department, chain and shoe stores.

Girl Is Fretfully Dissatisfied With Best Beau In His Company, Yet Longs for Him in His Absence; How Explain This Contradictory Attitude?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please tell me,—Is it love when you think of someone a great deal in their absence; then behave very independently toward them when you are with them, and, after you leave them, wish you had been nicer? You once wrote that, generally speaking, one is most clearly aware of his "true feeling" for another person, in that person's absence. When I am with this man I have in mind, I am dissatisfied with him. But when I am away from him, I want to be with him.

I have gone with him for several years, off and on. We have had several breaks, and then started seeing each other again. I feel in my heart that he was destined to mean something important to me. Yet I wonder why I act so indifferent when I am with him. He isn't physically repulsive to me. Quite the contrary. So how do you account for my contradictory attitude? My mother says I'm "in love with love," and he is just a symbol of what I think I want. Is she right?
CECILE.

DEAR CECILE: I think your mother has hit the nail on the head. If you were in love with the man, you would know it by now. Supposing you truly loved him, you would long since have made, and prayerfully kept, a fervent resolution (arrived at in some interval of anxious yearning when away from him), to be as gracious and tender to him, in person, as you are in your imaginary dealings with him.

It is not so much your thorny, involuntary "independence" of attitude toward the gentleman, when with him, as it is your "dissatisfied" first-hand reaction to his personality, appearance and behavior, which suggests that the man you dream of (in his absences) and the man himself, are cut to two different patterns, that cannot be reconciled. In his company, you are very sure of his devotion in you, and, because he invariably fails to measure up to the picture you carry in mind (a picture in which he and the "ideal man" are indistinguishably merged), essentially indifferent to his regard. Your negligent sauciness is an instinctive, implied dismissal of his suit.

However, having acquired the habit of associating his name or face with thoughts of love, romance or marriage, the House of Your Dreams (figuratively speaking), would seem poignantly empty if you were to put him finally, firmly and fortrightly out of it,—which you should do, of course, since he doesn't belong there. Such a habit (common to most young people who are impatiently waiting "true love's" coming), is instantaneously and effortlessly broken only when the truly congenial, the (shall we say?) "divinely right" suitor or sweetheart puts in an appearance.

But now that the delusive nature of your day dreaming has been pointed out to you, can't you see that you are wasting time, throwing your life out of joint, and keping yourself in a perpetual stew of fretful frustration, in succumbing to its beguilement? Break the habit by being roughly honest with yourself about the man's fundamental incompatability,—whenever you think of him in his absence. And don't permit yourself long hours in which to brood on his image. Keep busy, on the move, in the swim,—with the clean-cut purpose constantly in mind of meeting the man who actually is all that you wish this chap were.

Says Spiritual Melancholy Has Physical Basis

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On April 16, you discussed the problem of a childless young wife who is "haunted by a constant feeling of utter loneliness," despite the fact that she is married to a charming, devoted, prosperous man whose love she returns. You hold her to be the melancholy victim of shallow, bootless living, and advise her to have children,—by adoption, if need be.

But it is my opinion that unless she first conquers her neurasthenia, she would be shoving off, on helpless children, the burden of "psychoses" with which she, along with millions of others, is saturating the mental and spiritual climate of the modern world.

Heaven knows there are all too few balanced, stable parents in the world already,—without a neurotic woman deliberately acquiring offspring, not because she loves babies, but in the hope of finding more persons to whom to cling. This may seem a harsh statement, but I want "Disturbed" to face facts and eliminate her "soul-ache" before proceding to parenthood. Let us admit that most mental and spiritual melancholy has a physical basis. Few persons are able to transcend the claims of the body.

Chemists, working in laboratories all over the world, have established the fact that practically everybody would be incalculably benefitted by adding vitamin concentrates to their daily diet,—especially Vitamin B-Complex, which the body does not store, much of which is lost in cooking, storage, etc., and possibly may not have been present in the elements which produced the food in the first place.

The findings on this score, told by Dr. Paul de Kruif in an article, entitled "Famine Fighters," published in the December, 1940, Readers' Digest, are borne out by many scientists. And I call attention to page 231 of an article by Dr. Russell M. Wilder, of the Mayo Clinic, published in the Science News Letter for Aril 12, 1941, which gives startling disclosures on the subject. One full paragraph is devoted to the effects upon women of lack of thiamin (B-1), an important element in the B-Complex. Page 227 of the same Letter has another important article on the subject.

If "Disturbed" will apply this information to her case, she will be well on the way to creating her own Utopia. In addition, she (and other similarly neurasthenic women) should engage in some manual work, aside from housekeeping. Certain schools conduct courses in the art of making things. One woman of my acquaintance is finding great joy in making metal frames for mirrors and pictures in a school here, although she, too, has a "prosperous husband," as well as grandchildren! What a pity that more of us don't realize that neither husband nor children can fully satisfy the soul of a really worthwhile woman, who must always be finding new creative outlets for her spirit and new things to do with her hands.

But all of those things will prove unavailing, unless leavened with the indispensable ingredient of life,—to-wit, realization of the immediacy of that spiritual power which we call God, that has brought into being a universe built on immutable laws: a universe in which mankind is stumbling around, seeking assistance from every source except the Spiritual Life-Source itself. Sincerely yours, L. E. K.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Play the Piano By Home Study

AS YOU applaud the girl who plays the piano did you ever think you might be she? Audiences have fun, but the star of the party has lots more, so why not be a star?

Learning the piano need not mean a lot of drudgery. Almost from the first you can play tunes.

A chart pictures life-size the most used part of the piano keyboard. With each key is its music note, so when you slip your chart behind your real keyboard you see at a glance what key to strike for each note.

You'll see, too, that the chart keys are numbered. That's so you can learn tunes a short-cut way.

On popular music, above the melody lines, are little diagrams indicating simple chords you can play instead of the sometimes difficult accompaniments. The diagrams are for the D7 and G7 chords. A table shows by number which keys to play for each chord—the numbers, of course, corresponding to the key numbers on your chart.

You have only to pencil these numbers on your piece and then easily you ripple off the melody line with your right hand while your left plays the chords.

Our 24-page instruction book, "A Short Cut to Piano Playing," includes table of chords and keyboard chart, explains musical terms and quick way of learning tunes. Has six favorite pieces for practice. Book is 8½ by 12 inches.

Send 15c in coins for our instruction book, "A Short Cut to Piano Playing," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of instruction book.

Parents Should Use Diplomacy To Make Children Eat Properly

By Ida Jean Kain

PARENTS everywhere who have trouble presuading Johnny or Janet to eat their vegetables could take a lesson in principal psychology at the St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in Philadelphia.

"The main thing," says Dietitian Lillian Hack, "is to get the cooperation of the child." Miss Hack talks it over with the child as if he were a grown-up, and finds out what his major interest is. Sometimes it's a cinch to get a future quarterback to drink his milk.

One little boy at the hospital is faithfully eating his vegistables—which he didn't like at all—for the sole purpose of getting strong enough to whip the neighborhood bully.

Dislike to be Called Fatty

Children who are dubbed "Fatty" or "Skinny" by hteir schoolmates are fairly easily converted to the idea of good eating habits. No child likes either of those nicknames.

Having become well acquainted with thousands of children, the hospital staff has learned quite a lot about parents. When the subject of eating vegestables is broached they are inclined to chime in triumphantly with "I keep telling Johnny they are good for him!" It is Miss Hack's observation that nobody—child or grown-up—likes to do anything because it is "good" for him.

But it is just as bad psychology when the parent takes the attitude that "Oh, Gracie is going to be fat anyway. Everyone in our family is fat." If the parent feels that way, the child is licked from the beginning.

In dealing with so many children, certain definite trends have been noted. The overweight children usually like just one vegetable—potatoes—and they eat between meals. Also, with extreme overweight there is a tendency to foot trouble, even in childhood.

The underweight children have finicky appetites don't eat breakfast, and usually, won't eat their vegestables.

Underweight Are Finicky

It is not usual for the overweight child to be poorly nourished. When large quanities of jams, jellies, desserts, sodas and pastries are consumed, the child may easily fail to get the fruits vegetables and milk he really needs. Overweight children who go on a good diet often etxceed their expected growth while losingweight. InI every case in which weight is brought up or down to normal and there is a marked improvement in health, it is paraled by just as great an improvement in schoolwork and behavior.

I asked the doctor whether fat children usually have fat parents, and he told me that sometimes they don't but that "in most instances the fault is that of food habits." Overweight in childhood is too lightly dismissed as a sign of robust health, or as something that will be outgrown. Habits of wrong ecting are not conducive to health, and when firmly established they grow up with the child.

Sen. and Mrs. Smathers Plan Week-End Party

By Hope Ridings Miller

SEVERAL LUCKY Capitalites who were weekend guests of Senator and Mrs. William H. Smathers at Atlantic City not long ago are still talking about the wonderful time they had "enjoying a quiet rest . . . with something to do practically every minute." Well, it seems the Smathers are now hatching up another weekend party along the same lines; so come Friday afternoon, a number of our prominent citizens will be waiting in the Senate patio for the cavalcade of special automobiles that will take them directly to Haddon Hall, Atlantic City, for the weekend.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will be in the company; also, Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Senator and Mrs. Mon C. Wallgren, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Assistant Attorney General Matthew F. McGuire and Mrs. McGuire, and several others.

"We're not planning any special entertainment schedule," Mrs. Smathers told me yesterday. Everybody can do exactly as he pleases. On the other house party, most of our guests spent a good deal of time riding up and down the boardwalk."

I know they did. For days afterward, I saw photographs of Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black and Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley being wheeled gayly along Atlantic City's famous thoroughfare. Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill were in that party, too, and a number of others who will tell you, without a moment's hesitation, that they had the time of their lives.

The house party will officially be over Sunday afternoon, and several guests are planning to come back to Washington that night. A few, however, will stay over until Monday morning to return with Senator and Mrs. Smathers.

MORE GOINGS AND COMINGS: Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle are in Atlantic City where they will spend ten days. The S. G. has recovered from a recent attack of para typhoid, but he plans to stay away from his Washington desk until the first of next month . . . Shortly after he and Mrs. Biddle return, she will be off to Virginia to be principal speaker at the spring conclave of the Richmond Poetry Society May 3. The meeting, purposely arranged to take place in Garden Week, is to be held this year at Williamsburg. Mrs. Biddle (Katherine Garrison Chapin) has a group of New Mexico poems, "Sky Over Taos," in the spring number of "Voices."

You can add another to the long list of Latin-American naval officials who will arrive in Washington early next month. Commander Morinigo Delgado, Paraguayan chief of naval operations, will leave Asuncion April 27 and will arrive in Florida May 3. He will be in Washington May 7, accompanied by Lieut. Adolfo Roig Franco. The Paraguayan Minister, Dr. Juan Jose Soler, will give a reception for them May 8 or 9.

Bruce Smith, who has been in London for the Red Cross for many weeks, is now in Lisbon, and expects to take the clipper from there today, en route home.

WHEN PRETTY Peggy Lane, daughter of the United States Minister to Yugoslavia and Mrs. Arthur Bliss Lane, gathered in a few friends for cocktails Sunday afternoon, talk turned to the forthcoming benefit for Yugoslavia. The date is Friday, May 9. The place, the Yugoslav Legation; and the time, 9:30 p. m. Features of the entertainment being planned will include several dances in native costume, and the showing of films that Miss Lane made in Yugoslavia.

Mme. Fotitch, who was among those present at Miss Lane's party, told me that the list of sponsors for the event is almost complete and that final plans will be worked out this week.

A center of much favorable attention in Miss Lane's apartment at the Caravel is a photograph of her mother, made by Miss Lane herself several months before she left Belgrade. Guests at the Sunday gathering were urging Miss Lane to bring out some of her other photographs—a whole panel of which were on display in the Yugoslav pavilion at the New York World's Fair. You'll be seeing some of her work on posters advertising the Yugoslav benefit.

CAPITAL CALENDAR: Stratford, the Lee home in Westmoreland County, Va., will be the scene of a luncheon Thursday, May 15, at which Mrs. Harry B. Hawes will entertain in honor of Mrs. Henry A. Wallace . . . Mrs. Millard Tydings will be hostess at luncheon tomorrow . . . Mrs. William D. Byron, whose campaign for election to the House is waxing hot in Maryland's Sixth District, is going to be the inspiration for a lot of parties around here the next few weeks. I'll be giving you dates on that score sometime soon . . . Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles B. Drake are planning to give a supper party after the China Relief benefit at Constitution Hall on Sunday night . . . And the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt will have guests dining with them before the same fete.

Mrs. Johnson Plans Tea for Visitors

Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, wife of Representative Johnson, of Texas, will entertain at tea this afternoon in honor of visitors from her State. They are Mrs. J. C. Cain, daughter of the Undersecretary of the Interior, and Mrs. Alvin J. Wirtz, who is visiting her parents at the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. L. H. About the Town with Dudley Harmon

ABOUT TO exchange the placid life on a Bethesda estate for the bombs of London is Crown Prince Olav of Narway. He will fly back to England to take his place with his father, King Haakon.

The Crown Prince came over by clipper just before Christmas, not telling Princess Martha that he was coming because she worries about airplanes. The first she heard of his arrival was when he telephoned her from New York. During his stay in America Crown Prince Olav visited the Norwegian flying camp near Toronto and made several speeches in New York.

Another royal visitor is due soon for a return stay in Washington. Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg is expected to arrive Saturday from her home in Canada.

"DID YOU really pick up a gun when that uprising against your father was attempted a few years ago?" I asked Senhora Peixoto the other night at dinner.

"I certainly did," she replied, "but I hate to tell you I had no idea how to load it. My brother had to do that for me." The Vargas family had just gone to bed that evening when they heard the sound of machine guns. A fascist group was attempting to seize the palace and had bribed the guards to let them into the grounds. Senhora Peixoto said they spent an anxious night lying flat on the floor until the attempt was subdued.

In a dress of powder blue net, sprinkled with tiny gold stars, the Brazilian visitor didn't look as though she'd ever weathered an uprising. She is slight, dark and only in her middle twenties. I was interested to hear that, next to Roosevelt, the most noted American figure in Brazil is Mayor LaGuardia. Senhora Peixoto was delighted to meet him the other day in New York.

Luis Sampaio, Brazilian business man who came to Washington with the Peixtos, renewed acquaintanceship with Gen. George Marshall while here. When the general paid a good will visit to Brazil some months ago, Senhor Sampaio entertained him at a big barbecue on his ranch near Rio de Janeiro, Senhor Sampaio was describing at dinner the menagerie which he keeps there, featuring tapirs, jaguars, and other Brazilian animals which Americans see only at zoos.

ACCOMPANYING Douglas Fairbanks on his goodwill tour of South America are Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson Robbins. The party will board a plane at Miami and make the trip by air, returning in about six weeks. Mr. Robbins is the son of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins and has been working here in the Nelson Rockefeller office.

DIPLOMATIC doings: Ibrahim Seyfullah Esin, who was known in Washington simply as "Seyfullah" before the recent Turkish order to take last names, will return to Washington shortly for a visit. Formerly with the embassy, he left four or five years ago and is now serving in Tokyo. He is expected to arrive about the middle of May . . . The newly arrived Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Georges-Picot are unusually well traveled, even for a diplomatic family. He has served in Sofia, Bangkok, Tunisia, Mexico and many other places. He went with Gen. Chiang Kai-shek to Hangkow and then to Chungking after the bombing of Shanghai, and when ordered from the latter city, left his dachsund, Bambi, with Nelson Johnson, our Ambassador to China then. Mme. George-Picot, who is a Russian, made a six weeks trip to Tibet while they were stationed in China.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN married to a Norwegian wrote a friend here to ask if she could find a place to live for her husband's cousin, a Norwegian girl. The visitor had an "unpronounceable name, so had decided to change it to "Jane Harris," as she planned to live in this country.

Finally, after much effort, the Washington friend found two charming women who had a house here and were willing to take a paying guest into their home. Arrangements were completed, and Miss Harris wrote that she would be coming to Washington shortly.

One afternoon the two women's telephone rang and a pleasant voice said "This is Jane Harris. May I come and see you?" They explained they were just dashing off to a cocktail party, but would she mind dropping in at 8? On their return from the party they found standing on their front steps a young colored girl who explained she was Jane Harris. Racking their brains to try to remember if they had heard of Norwegian Negroes, the sisters invited her into their living room. Finally, one of them said, "How long have you been in this country, Miss Harris? "Why, all my life," she replied. "I was born in Alabama." Rather at a loss, the hostess went on to say she hoped Miss Harris would like Washington. "I sure do," was the answer. "I like your house, too, and I'm sure glad the employment agency sent me up here. They said you needed a cook."

P. S. The other Jane Harris has not yet arrived.

Marchs Feted After Show

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fredric March filled several rows at the National Theater last night for the Washington opening of "Hope For a Harvest." Senator and Mrs. Robert La Follette, who have known the Marches for years, entertained at a dinner-for-12 before the play and then brought all their guests on to the theater. Later, Maj. and Mrs. Edwin N. Clark gathered in a small company for supper at their home on Tracy Place. Guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. March, who are to be widely feted during their Capital stay. Among those attending the Clark party were Senator and Mrs. La Follette and their theater guests, several of whom came from out of town especially for the occasion.

Occupying her usual "left-stage" box was Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, who had brought a party with her. "First nighters" in Washington always include a selection of prominent members of the various Capital sets, official, service and residential. Among last night's were noted: Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Del Mar, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon and many more.

Daughters of 1812 Hear Adm. Blandy, Pennington

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Rear Admiral William H. P. Ordnance of the Navy Depart-Ordnance of the Nevy Department, and L. R. Pennington, inspector with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, last night addressed the National Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812, at the opening program of its forth-ninth associate council, in session at the Willard Hotel today. Mrs. Percy Young Schelly, of Philadelphia, president National, presided.

Admiral Blandy, speaking on "The United States Navy Today and in the Future," pointed to the serious mistakes of the country following wars of the past in allowing its Navy to deteriorate. "That conflict of long ago, which your society commemorates," he told the Daughters, "established another habit which became almost a tradition and one of which we as a nation could not be proud; namely, that our country faced a war unprepared."

"Fortunately for the Navy, and therefore for the country," he said, "there came to the White House in 1933, another President who thoroughly understood the value of sea power. Commencing in that year, we started to change our tradition of unpreparedness, and since then our Navy has steadily gone forward.

"The whole country now believes that we must have a second major fleet, a 'two-ocean Navy'; and this we are building as fast as bottlenecks and strikes will let us. But for the first time in our history we face a crisis with a strong and well-balanced sea force."

He gave a brief inventory of this country's present naval craft and their superiority, spoke of the value of having an air force within the Navy because of the close cooperation needed between planes and ships, and paid high tribute to the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps, where every man now in the fighting force is a volunteer.

Admiral Blandy's final admonition was "After we have learned our lessons in the present great defense effort, let us remember them."

Mr. Pennington told of the increased activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in connection with national defense. There is close cooperation, he said, between the F. B. I., the police and military and naval intelligence services. During the past several months, 500 regional conferences have been held with 8,000 police executives, representing approximately 200,000 officers. Weekly conferences are held with the Federal organizations, military and naval intelligence and officials of the State and Treasury Departments.

A plant survey to forestall possible sabotage in the defense industries is under way, said Mr. Pennington. Already 1,300 key plants have been inspected, and 300 more will be completed soon. Ultimately 12,000 will be included in the survey.

"The totalitarians always want to create a furore about sabotage," he said, "for it adds to the confusion." He quoted figures of insurance companies on fires and explosions in the past three years, revealing that there has been no appreciable increase during the past year.

One of the features of last night's program was the unfurling of the Real Daughters' flag by two real Daughters of 1812, Miss Mary Jane Metz, of West Virginia, and Mrs. Herbert Blandy, of the District.

Music preceding the meeting was by the United States Marine Orchestra, with Andrew C. Bodnar conducting. The guest soloist of the occasion was Dorothea Dix Lawrence, of the Metropolitan Opera, who is a guest of Mrs. Lane Schofield, registrar national.

William Tyler Page, author of "The American's Creed," led the repetition of the creed, and Mrs. Franklin M. Miller conducted the devotional. There was a greeting from Col. Frederic Gilbert Bauer, president general of the General Society, War of 1812, and a welcome to the associate council by Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, first vice president national. Miss Margaret Elma Naylor, chairman national of the correct use of the flag committee, led the pledge of allegiance.

Yesterday afternoon a reception was given by the national officers at the national headquarters of the society, 1461 Rhode Island Avenue.

Mrs. Schelly and members of her staff received. Mrs. Sol Lansburgh was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements.

Today the sessions will open at the Willard Hotel at 9 o'clock. A banquet will be held tonight with Representative Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio, and Representative James E. VanZandt, of Pennsylvania, as guest speakers.

MORE VOLUNTEER WORKERS are urgently needed at the Chevy Chase branch of the Montgomery County Chapter of the American Red Cross, according to Mrs. E. Burton Corning and Mrs. Alfred J. Steffen, who are in charge of production. Mrs. George A. Finch is chairman of the chapter.

It is not necessary to be a member of the Red Cross, or to be an expert at sewing or knitting, they point out. There is work for everyone to do and the need is steadily increasing. The next quota of materials coming in will be double that now being completed and many of the articles will go to camps nearby—needs of the United States military forces are being served as well as those of the Nations on the battlefront.

Women are urged not to let spring housecleaning, gardening and the round of activities attendant on the closing of the club season interfere with their Red Cross service. While spring comes to America, destruction goes on abroad.

The Chevy Chase branch has just completed 5,13 articles, including 988 garments and 100 layettes which have 26 articles in each. The workers meet from 9 to 11 a. m. in the basement of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Connecticut Avenue and Dunlop Streets, and many take knitting and sewing home with them to complete there.

Mrs. Edward G. Adams has been elected secretary of the branch to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. T. Stanley Holland.

HEADS WOMEN'S COMMITTEE—Mrs. A. M. McLachlen, wife of the president of the D. C. Bankers Association, will serve as chairman of the women's committee for convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association to be held at The Homestead, Hot Springs, Va., June 5-8. Mrs. T. Stanley Holland, wife of the first vice president of the association, will act as vice chairman.

Others on the committee include Mrs. John A. Reilly, Mrs. A. Scott Offutt, Mrs. Albert S. Gatley, Mrs. Willard B. Barker, Mrs. George M. Fisher, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. William B. Willard, Mrs. Stanley D. Willis and Mrs. W. T. Vandoren.

LONG RECORD—For 12 consecutive years, Marcia Burns Chapter of the District D. A. R. has won the State prize for the largest number of subscriptions to the National Historical Magazine. Dempsey Tells Democrat Club Of Ship Project

The expanded activities of the Maritime Commission are the beginning of the greatest and most brilliant chapter of the American merchant marine in world history, Maritime Commissioner John J. Dempsey predicted yesterday in an address before the luncheon meeting of the Womans National Democratic Club.

The commission, with a total of $900,000,000 to be expended in the next two years for the construction of emergency vessels, will employ in excess of 500,000 shipyard workers, he said. Within two weeks after President Roosevelt announced that 212 ships were to be built to be turned over to the British government, the commission had placed the order for all of the necessary shipyard facilities, he said, and contracts had actually been let for 184 of the vessels to cost $364,800,000. This, declared Commissioner Dempsey, sets a record for speed in the shipbuilding history of any nation.

Close liaison is being maintained, he said, between the commission and the Army and Navy to utilize transports as well as commercial tonnage in the shipment of defense materials to the new bases in the Atlantic and to the expanded bases in the Pacific.

He added that surveys made by the emergency shipping division are accounting for every available ton of shipping. The division is seeking to utilize this tonnage to the fullest extent, thus minimizing if not actually preventing any threatened emergency shortage.

St. James 'Mothers' Plan Party Tomorrow

Health Chiefs Of U. S. to Talk Defense Needs

How public health officers will meet problems arising from national defense will be discussed at the thirty-ninth State and Territorial Health Officers' Conference to be held here next Monday under auspices of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Announcement of the meeting and that of the State and Provisional Health Officers' Conference, to be held at the same time, was made yesterday by Dr. E. R. Coffey, new assistant surgeon general in charge of the division of sanitary reports and statistics.

Suggesting topics for discussion, Dr. Coffey reminded that many localities have greatly increased populations growing out of defense activities. Some localities may find facilities such as water supplies badly overtaxed with threat to public health.

The problem, too, of overseeing health conditions in areas adjacent military establishments which are frequented by service men will be discussed. The public health agencies were said to be having difficulty in obtaining services of medical men and engineers experienced in public health work.

This may form a conference topic, it was said. The sessions will not be open to the public and will be held in the Public Health Service auditorium.

Complaint Pressed Over Starling Trap

After failure of an earlier move, a representative of the Washington Humane Society appeared yesterday before the assistant corporation counsel in Police Court to complain against officials of an F Street office building, where a sticky material was used to trap starlings. Robert Poplar, officer of the society, asked for a warrant based on the District's Game and Fish Law.

Last week the society asked for a warrant for violation of the cruelty to animals law, but Police Court Judge John P. McMahon held this law did not apply to the starling. The ledge of the building was coated with a gummed material to hold onto the starlings.

Officials of the building said they would not use the sticky stuff again.

Pelley Wins Plea To Retain Bond

William Dudley Pelley, leader of the defunct Silver Shirt organization, yesterday won the right to remain free on bond until final decision of his appeals against return to North Carolina for sentence for violating the blue sky laws.

The United States Court of Appeals here, which ordered Pelley returned last week, refused yesterday to revoke Pelley's $5,000 bond, as requested by District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

T. Edward O'Connell, Pelley's counsel, said he would appeal the extradition case to the Supreme Court.

Proctor Wars On Trial Delays

Justice James M. Proctor warned attorneys yesterday that cases must be ready for trial at the appointed time, in criminal sessions of the District Court.

Justice Proctor said no postponements would be allowed either Government or defense counsel unless extraordinary reasons were shown.

Because of the heavy volume of criminal cases, three justices have been hearing them for several months. Other justices of the criminal court are T. Alan Goldsborough and F. Dickinson Letts.

Pneumonia Victim Found Dead in Woods

Francis R. Diggs, 35, of 1229 V Street Southeast, was discovered dead early yesterday in the woods at the foot of the 1500 block of Morris Road Northeast and his death was attributed to pneumonia, police said last night. The body, identified at the District Morgue by his brother, Leo Diggs, 2022 North Capitol Street, was found by Arthur Butler, a watchman at a sandpit near the spot.

Is this the great gasoline discovery of our time?

FROM TEXAS CITY COMES NEWS THAT MAY REVOLUTIONIZE PRESENT THEORIES OF GASOLINE CHEMISTRY

American Oil Company pioneers entirely new way of making gasoline! World's first commercial Hydro-forming unit now in production! Flame Control tested with remarkable results.

The people of Texas City, Texas, are proud of the American Oil Company's great refinery there. It includes the two biggest refining units in the world. Seven hundred and forty acres of Wonderland! They point to it as one of the show places of the state.

But one day a new structure began to take shape. People wondered . . . what was this feverish activity . . . why these swarms of hulking trucks . . . why these hundreds of men working?

Here were these great modern refining units—yet they were adding more equipment! What was going on? Then the news came out . . . it was the revolutionary new Hydro-forming unit!

For months the petroleum industry buzzed with the news of the discovery of this entirely new way of making gasoline . . . a process that may revolutionize all previous theories of gasoline chemistry. Chemical engineers call it Hydro-forming . . . a method of building new and important qualities into gasoline . . . a way that was impossible before the American Oil Company pioneered this wonderful process.

What Does This Great Discovery Mean?

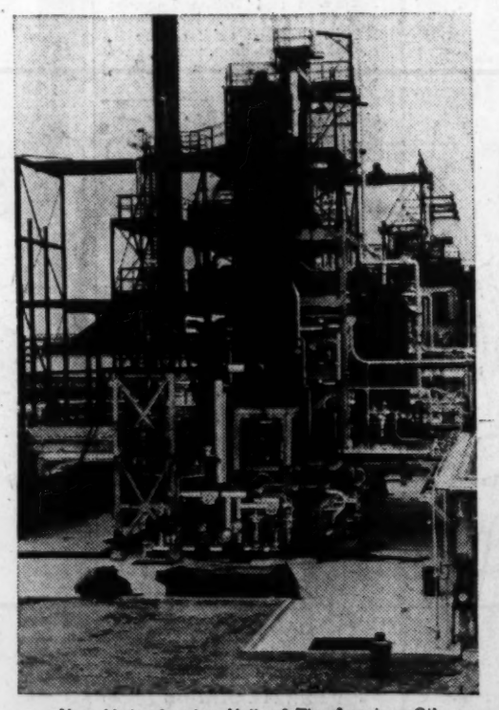
Burning gasoline is the source of engine power. Uncontrolled, combustion is violent, with a detonating, explosive shock that wastes energy. There was one best way to cut this shock down—by controlling the flame—and this has been the goal of chemists for decades!

Now—Flame Control—Combustion Control!

Now, in the revolutionary, new Hydro-formed American Gas, FLAME CONTROL has been accomplished! From this amazing refining process comes a new, super-volatile, highly aromatic gasoline that burns more rapidly. Yet shock is greatly reduced—combustion is controlled—and more usable power is at last attained.

Flame Control Means Cushioned Power!

As FLAME CONTROL cuts shock, CUSHIONED POWER comes into being—sustained, increasing, e-x-p-a-n-d-i-n-g pressure that drives the piston down, through its full course. Now we have new thrust—new power that gets more out of the potential energy of gasoline—that cushions it, harnesses it—puts it to work! This is a new kind of power—a different kind of power. Engines now turn in a soft, gentle purr, when idling, or when running "all out." There is new s-m-o-o-t-h-n-e-s-s, because violent explosive shock is greatly reduced. Bearings and moving parts receive less destructive pounding.



New Hydro-forming Unit of The American Oil Company, Now In Operation in Texas City, Texas.

Revolutionizes Old Theories of Octane!

Because of the different way it is refined, Hydro-formed American Gas is more volatile than ever before—more aromatic—more easily vaporized. Its knock-arresting constituents do not remain in liquid state, as in the average conventional gas, but become vaporized—distributed to all cylinders more evenly and impartially. Thus in Hydro-formed American Gas, anti-knock is far more efficient.

Gains Octane on the Road!

Official results of extensive road tests by Industry Committees show that conventional gasolines, on the average, lose octane numbers on the road. But from the super-volatility of Hydro-formed American Gas—from its greater aromacity—from Flame Control and Cushioned Power—comes ROAD OCTANE that actually surpasses laboratory figures. And it's ROAD OCTANE that counts—not laboratory ratings!

Here, then, is the new Hydro-formed American Gas. Radically new from start to finish. Point for point the finest American Gas that ever left our refinery! Yet it still sells at regular gas price!

Famous AMOCO-GAS Now Hydro-formed, Too!

The new Hydro-forming process has also been applied to Amoco-Gas, the original special motor fuel, which likewise moves forward and upward to an all-time high in quality and efficiency.

Hydro-forming is the latest triumph of gasoline science—the newest demonstration of the enormous power that lies in gasoline—new, dramatic proof of how much work per drop it can perform!

New Hydro-formed AMERICAN GAS

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Canada and U. S. Plan Personnel Exchange

The Federal Government may exchange personnel with Canada in its general plan of merging economies to supply war materials and supplies to Great Britain. The Canadian government has sent two officials here to get our Government's blueprints on its national roster of scientists, engineers and other professional people. It is planned to set up a similar roster in Canada with the same code numbers so that personnel can be interchanged. The national roster is a joint enterprise of the Civil Service Commission and the National Resources Planning Board.

More than half a million scientists, engineers and other technicians have been polled. Their training, experience, hobbies and all other background details are coded on punch cards. When the Army, Navy or any other Federal agency wants a skilled specialist it goes to the roster. And defense agencies are using the roster constantly as it saves time and money.

England, Germany, France and a number of other foreign countries are understood to have set up similar rosters to enable them to locate specialists without delay. Chief of the roster is Leonard Carmichael, who divides his time between Washington and Tufts College, of which he is president. James O'Brien is executive secretary. The Civil Service Commission doesn't require exams for persons whose names are on the roster. It certifies them without question.

An average of 104 new Federal employes were hired daily in Washington during February. Over the entire country the average daily rate bounced up to 801 new workers. Of course, new high records of Federal employment were set both here and in the field. The number of departmental employes here on March 1 was 161,527 according to a count by the Civil Service Commission. The over-all total here, including Navy Yard and other employes who have field classifications, probably would reach 195,000. The War Department hired 1,626 new employes here in February and the Navy took on 797. Commerce reduced its staff by 449, mainly Census workers.

Gay Shepperson, associate assistant coordinator of health, welfare, and recreation in the Federal Security Agency, is resigning. She was formerly State WPA director for Georgia. Geoffrey May, associate director of Social Security's Bureau of Public Assistance, will succeed her. . . . Elizabeth Wickenden also is leaving the Federal Security Agency. She formerly was assistant NYA administrator.

Batt Leaves Soon

William Batt, jr., OPM official, will fly to London. He will assist Averill Harriman, who is in England to determine the country's war needs. . . . Leigh Plummer, Wall Street Journal correspondent, has been placed in charge of information at Leon Henderson's new price control agency. . . . Harry McAlpin, who has had one tiff after another with Federal Security officials while working at the District Employment Center, will be transferred to NYA. . . . Employes in the examining division at the Civil Service Commission have been ordered to work 30 minutes overtime each day. The order merely confirms what has been a fact for months. Longer hours are usually worked.

The War Department has been given authority to hire hostesses and librarians for the Army without going through Civil Service. The commission probably is very pleased. A merit test for hostesses would attract at least a million women. . . . And speaking of hostesses, the Government girls who signed up to dance with draftees are going to be organized along military lines. The girls will elect their own general and chief of staff at a meeting Thursday night in the Departmental Auditorium. Additional hostesses will be registered at the meeting. . . . AFGE's Civil Service lodge will elect officers tonight.

President Roosevelt is understood to have discovered a couple of kinks in the proposed executive orders that would make effective the Ramspeck Act. That's the explanation of the delay in issuing the orders at the White House. . . . The country must be sold on the defense program. The Treasury is daily receiving small amounts of money from people who want to see the program a success.

Frankness in Virginia

Ashland, Va., April 21 (A.P.)—Paul Watkins, former promotion manager of the Chicago Daily News who now publishes his own paper, the weekly Herald-Progress, asked readers to give his new home a name "based upon some aspect of the editor's work."

One of the first replies, he reported, suggested "Watkins' Bluff."

Caveat Emptor—Modern Version

Birmingham, Ala., April 21 (A.P.)—Willie Bell was wiser but sadder today.

Needing cash, he sold for $15 a prized pistol.

But as he pocketed the money, he heard a command from the purchaser and turned to find himself looking down the barrel of the gun.

Willie forked over the $15 and the purchaser left.

ANNUAL NOTRE DAME NIGHT was observed by the Notre Dame Club of Washington with a dinner last night at the Shoreham Hotel. Among the alumni atending were (left to right) Senator D. 1,000 Defense Workers to Use D. C. Center

After agreeing yesterday to allot approximately one-half of the new Municipal Center Building for temporary use by the War Department, the Commissioners today will begin preparations to permit occupancy by some 1,000 defense workers next month.

Yielding to urgent War Department pleas for emergency space, the city heads met yesterday with Clay J. Guthridge, chief of planning and space control, Public Buildings Administration, to work out tentative details.

Although the Municipal Center was not scheduled to open until June, the War Department's immediate need for expansion facilities was taken into consideration and its half of the space will be ready about the middle of May, it was reported at the District Building.

500,000 Square Feet Needed

Guthridge announced following the conference that all agencies of the War Department, greatly increased under national defense activities, must have about 500,000 square feet of extra space.

He said Federal occupancy of the Municipal Center would not last longer than six months. Provisions, he pointed out, have been made in the fifth deficiency bill for the construction of several temporary buildings. Offices in the Municipal Center will be used by employes of the Quartermaster General's Office, Guthridge said.

It was also reported following the meeting that the question of the Federal Government using the new National Guard Armory drill hall at the foot of East Capitol Street is still under consideration. This will probably be "drafted" if sufficient space is not found elsewhere.

Guthridge said that the 225,000 square feet in the Municipal Center will be about equally divided by the District government and the War Department.

D. C. Agencies Must Wait

The June moving day for local agencies will remain, the Commissioners announced. Half of the building for which special facilities have been provided for District departments will be retained. Municipal agencies which will move in as scheduled include the Metropolitan Police Department, Department of Vehicles and Traffic, the Health Department laboratories, the City Refuse Division, the fire marshal and the Fire Department staff.

District agencies which must wait until the War Department finds other space will be the Public Welfare Department, including the public assistance division of the Playgrounds and Community Center Departments, the Insurance Department, the Department of Weights and Measures, the Minimum Wage Board and all the Health Department except the laboratories.

Notre Dame Alumni Hold Banquet Here

The spiritual, patriotic and educational ideals of their alma mater were emphasized before 250 Notre Dame alumni of Washington last night, as fellow graduates throughout the country observed annual University Notre Dame Night.

Senator D. Worth Clark, of Idaho, who was graduated from the university in 1923, was principal speaker at a dinner in the Shoreham Hotel. Addresses by Postmaster General Frank C. Walker and the Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, Notre Dame president, were heard in a broadcast from Chicago.

First Assistant Postmaster General Ambrose O'Connell was also a speaker at the Washington banquet, as were Representative Vincent Harrington, of Iowa; Representative Joseph P. O'Hara, of Minnesota, and Dr. Edward J. Heffron, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Men. District Attorney Edward M. Curran, not a Notre Dame graduate, spoke to the alumni. Andrew C. Auth, club president, and Leo F. Mullin, dinner chairman, also spoke.

Stonemason Falls 15 Floors to Death

James Lang Moffat, 53-year-old stonemason of Burdette, Va., fell to his death yesterday from a scaffold on the fifteenth floor of the Navy Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.

A fellow employe, Milton Yeager, colored, 46, of 443 H Street Northwest, caught Moffat's overalls in an effort to rescue him but the fabric ripped loose in the helper's hands.

Following an investigation by Joseph Nolte, of the Montgomery County Police, who found all working equipment in order, Dr. C. E. Hawks, county medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Younger Police Asked —But Not an Inch Taller

The Commissioners want their policemen younger, but not an inch taller.

They approved recommendations from Maj. Ernest W. Brown yesterday to lower the minimum and maximum age requirements for applicants to the force, but vetoed a proposal to increase height demands from 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 9 inches.

Saying, in effect, he saw no need for the one-inch height increase, Commissioner John Russell Young commented:

"Some of our best policemen are little fellows."

The recommendations were made by Maj. Brown in line with Civil Service proposals. The minimum age for policemen was reduced from 22 to 21 and the maximum age from 32 to 31.

Citizens Back Underground Parking Plan

Underground parking facilities beneath the Mall and several downtown parks were indorsed last night by the Interfederation Conference, representing more than 100 citizens associations in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Delegates called the plan, which was proposed by Representative William T. Shulte, chairman of the House subcommittee on District traffic, "the only practical means of relieving a traffic situation which is growing steadily worse."

Culver B. Chamberlain, delegate from the District, was named to head a committee to study Washington traffic conditions and report on possible remedies for confusing multiple traffic control and parking signs, alleged faulty traffic light timing double parking and other "local traffic hazards."

Other members of the committee are Julian D. Simpson, W. G. Copley, Washington I. Cleveland and Dr. T. P. Martin.

Lincoln Civic

Members of the Lincoln Civic Association last night cited five Washington police officers and a fire department private for "meritorious service to the community and to the District of Columbia." The six men will be honored at the association's annual banquet May 16 in the Francis Junior High School.

Police officers selected for awards were Inspector Edward J. Kelly, who has charge of the Third District; Capt. Walter Storm, Lieut. Robert J. Barrett, Lieut. G. R. Wallrodt and Detective Lester Rank, all of No. 3 Precinct. Private Paul Howsty, No. 4 Fire Engine Company, was also named for an award for saving the life of a child in a Wiltburger Street fire 10 days ago.

The association did not announce the specific acts for which the policemen were cited.

Piney Branch

Piney Branch Citizens Association last night went on record against the proposed "cafeteria court" for traffic violations and recommended the appointment of another judge for the police court. Both points were among proposals advocated by the Keystone Automobile Club under discussion at this meeting.

In the "cafeteria court" plan, violators of certain traffic regulations, such as for parking, stop signs and possibly minor speed offenses, would be permitted to sign a plea of guilty and a waiver of trial, making it unnecessary for them to appear before the judge.

Elwood Seal, president of the association, appointed a transportation committee: J. D. McGrath, Joseph DeYoung and Hugh Brewster. The meeting was held in Roosevelt High School.

Lincoln Park

Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night adopted resolutions, protesting against an increase in the tax rate above $1.75; recommending no change from manufactured gas to natural gas at present in the District; indorsing in principle H. R. 3736 designed to keep rents from soaring.

Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director, Bureau of Tuberculosis, Health Department, spoke on prevention of tuberculosis and stressed the need for additional funds for the bureau.

The association did not give outright indorsement to the bill to regulate rents because it was felt that $10,000 salaries proposed for the commission would be out of proportion to the services rendered, an association official said after the meeting. It was held at Bryan School with A. D. Calvert, president, presiding.

Pleads Not Guilty Of Firing at Wife

Joseph M. Fant, 53, of 3221 Mount Pleasant Street Northwest, pleaded not guilty in Police Court to a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Police said the man had an argument with his wife, Mrs. Pauline F. Fant, 42, and daughter Barbara, 18, at their home on Sunday. Judge John P. McMahon ordered Fant held under $3,000 bond for the action of the grand jury.

Police said the man fired one shot at his wife, the bullet going wild. Barbara, according to police, leaped in front of her mother as the shot was fired.

Boy, 15, Badly Burned

Marvin Wright, 5, colored, 721 Ball Court Northwest, received third-degree burns, police reported, when his clothing caught fire yesterday as he played with matches in the bedroom of his home.

Tax Formula Debate Is Set For Thursday

Charge 'Big Fellows Are 'Ducking' Levies Is Brought Before House Committee

In a session marked by a charge that the bulk of District real estate taxes are paid by small property owners and that "the big fellows are ducking," the House District Committee yesterday agreed to debate the Overton fiscal formula at 10:30 a. m. Thursday.

The formula is a fiscal procedure which would boost by more than $3,000,000 the amount of the 1942 Federal payment toward municipal expenses of the Capital.

The terms upon which President Roosevelt has agreed to support the formula were revealed for the first time when Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, read to the committee the text of an amendment to the formula bill of Senator John Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana.

The formula would make the percentage of District expenditures to be paid by the Federal Government equal to the ratio of United States land to the full area of the city. The amendment would require the city to spend for capital expenditures an amount "at least" equal to the Federal payment.

Levies Called Too Low

The probable tenor of Thursday's committee debate was foreshadowed at yesterday's meeting by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who charged that District realty levies are "too low." Commenting upon an over-the-weekend prediction by Representative Everett M. Dirksen, ranking minority member of the committee, that the House would reject the Overton formula and vote to raise taxes on real estate, Schulte declared:

"Ninety per cent of real estate taxes in the District are paid by small property owners and the big fellows are ducking."

Schulte attacked District real estate assessments, declaring that, for example, the site of the new House Office Building was assessed for $300,000 and was sold to the Government for $1,000,000.

"Make these fellows pay real taxes," declared Representative Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, as Schulte continued with a demand that Washington newspapers publish the District tax and assessment list.

Show Who's Paying

"I want folks to see who's paying the freight around here," Schulte said.

In other actions yesterday, the committee:

Unanimously approved Chairman Randolph's bill authorizing the District Commissioners to conduct experimental blackouts in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia after Randolph urged speedy action in view of "some conditions that could come to pass."

Recommended to the attention of the District appropriations subcommittee, city officials and the Capital Transit Co., findings of Schulte's traffic investigation committee which called for subways, parking reforms and mandatory jail sentences for speeders.

Approved a bill to authorize operation of a canteen at the Glenn Dale (Md.) Tuberculosis Sanatorium.

The Overton amendment provides that:

"Out of the total amount appropriated by the regular annual District appropriation bill for each fiscal year there shall be allocated for capital expenditures, whether such expenditures be made from highway, water or general funds, an amount at least equal to the annual payment of the United States . . ."

1942 Comparison

If applied to the 1942 budget, the Overton formula would set the Federal payment at a little more than $9,000,000. Total capital outlays for the District in 1942 are estimated at $10,600,000. Of this total, $5,000,000 represent capital outlays for the Highway and Water Departments, which are to be met by gasoline and water taxes and are not included in the general operating budget.

Thus, out of a Federal payment of $9,000,000, the District could expect to have a balance of $3,400,000 to apply to operating expenses or for expenditure for further capital improvements.

During discussion of the blackout bill, Sauthoff questioned a clause relieving the District of liability in event of personal injury on unlighted streets. An adult, Sauthoff held, could be held liable on grounds that his injury could be attributed to his own negligence in violating special blackout ordinances.

Aimed at Frivolous Suits

But, he pointed out, minors cannot be held to be negligent if they suffer injury. Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech explained the provision was intended to protect the District from "frivolous" suits.

Sauthoff urged that first tryouts of the blackouts here be arranged to last only a few minutes to help residents of the city to accustom themselves to them. To Hunter's observation that the city's thousands of tourists might be endangered as the blackout would take them by surprise, Representative Russell declared:

"They should know something's going on when it gets dark and they could stop under a tree and wait until it's over."

Schulte said he considered the danger slight, adding that "on a great many Washington streets we have a constant blackout."

Roberts Calls Colleges Church 'Bottlenecks'

The universities and colleges are the bottlenecks today in the work of the church, Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, last night told the Church Society for College Work.

In an address before 200 men at the Metropolitan Club Justice Roberts said, "It is a source of wonder and encouragement to me that men will come to these meetings not to see a movie or hear about the building of the Brooklyn Bridge, but to learn something about this subject so close to the heart of Christian men."

Justice Roberts pointed out that the faith of the future may only be built upon a foundation established in the hearts of undergraduates. The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Church, in a plea for competent young men to serve as priests in undergraduate institutions, asserted: "It is curious that more laymen don't battle to have more vigorous representation in the colleges where there is so great a concentration of young Americans.

"As a military man would say," he continued, "there is the place to drop the heavy ammunition."

William R. Castle, former Undersecretary of State, declared, "Youth today appears lost and a great opportunity consequently is opened by youth's seeking of something that will give them faith and hope. Chaplains in colleges, by understanding the problems of life, have a great opportunity to aid their fellowmen and especially the young men who will give to America the leadership in the emerging new social order."

The Church Society for College Work is an organization of the Episcopal Church which seeks to raise funds for the establishment of competent chaplains in institutions of higher learning.

1812 Society Speaker Warns Of 5th Columns

Expansion of Nation-wide "front" movements since 1930 was discussed in an address on "The Fifth Column" by Walter S. Steele, managing editor of the National Republic magazine, last night at the forty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Society of the War of 1812 in the District.

Principal speaker at the meeting at the Army and Navy Club, Steele said that as a witness before the Dies Committee recently he changed that there are an estimated 6,500,000 Communists or "red front" members in the United States, and that they expend more than $10,000,000 annually.

In 1930, he went on, there were about a half-dozen Nation-wide "front" movements, whereas today there are 640 or more "national front cooperating or penetrated movements," he added. It is estimated, he said, that the Nazis and Fascists are spending as much money as the Communists each year in promoting their activities in this country.

Frank B. Steele, president of the local branch of the society, presided at the meeting of Descendants of Soldiers and Sailors of the War of 1812. About 25 persons attended. Wade H. Ellis, president of the Sons of the American Revolution in the District, brought greetings.

Dr. Weiss Wins Garden Show Sweepstakes

Dr. Freeman Weiss was declared sweepstakes winner over a score of competitors who brought 155 exhibits to the Woodridge Garden Club Narcissus Show last night in McKendree Methodist Church, Twenty-fourth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

Dr. Weiss, who scored a total of 82 points, also captured first places in classifications for Trumpet Narcissus Bersheba and Short Cup Narcissus Orange Glow.

Mrs. J. J. Srnka brought in the best artistic arrangement of narcissi in the show, the judges decided, while the best miniature arrangement was presented by Mrs. H. A. Linger.

Mrs. C. E. Ross and Mrs. F. E. Burgess, scoring 20 points each, tied as sweepstakes winners in the artistic arrangement classes. Mrs. Srnka was sweepstakes winner in the other flower classes.

Others who won first, second or third places in the show's 50 classes were: M. C. Wilson, Mrs. M. H. Sutton, Mrs. Harry R. Copping, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shiner, Mrs. E. J. Moon, Mrs. J. G. Kingsbury, Shirley Copping, Mrs. M. C. Kissinger, H. J. Clay, Albert H. Englebrecht.

Congressmen Attack Golf Links Setup

Government Spends 'Millions on Courses' Run by Individuals, Rep. Schulte Says

Possibility of Congressional inquiry into control of recreation facilities in the District loomed last night after members of the House District Committee yesterday attacked operation of the city's four public golf courses.

The attack was launched by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, as the committee gave preliminary consideration to a bill to create a Recreation Department, with recreation centers and school and city playgrounds in charge of a three-member board.

"We find that the Federal Government is spending millions on golf and tennis courts which are handled by an individual," Schulte declared. "Some one is living in the lap of luxury because of the generosity of the Federal Government."

Public golf courses—but not tennis courts—in the District are operated by the S. G. Loeffler Operating Co., under five-year lease with option of five-year renewal. The lease was let two years ago by the Welfare and Recreation Association.

Representative Hunter, chairman of the Parks and Recreation Subcommittee, told the committee it is his understanding that the only "duty" of the leasee is to maintain and improve the courses. Hunter said he doubted improvements made have been adequate.

Later Hunter announced he would hold hearings early next week on the Recreation Department bill which he introduced last week "by request." The bill is sponsored by a group of former playground directors and Community Center Department employes who lost their positions when recreation facilities of the school system and the municipal government were consolidated under Lewis Barrett, then recreation coordinator.

Hunter said he was puzzled over the whereabouts of a second recreation bill. This measure was drafted by the President's Recreation Committee after years of study by the District Commissioners, the Board of Education and officials of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

Mrs. Smithey Gives Recital Of Organ Music at Chapel

District of Columbia Chapter American Guild of Organists presents Hester Smithey in a recital Monday night in Washington Chapel of Latter Day Saints. Program: Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Chorale-Prelude, "I Call to Thee" and "In Thee Is Gladness" (Bach), Cycle No. 30 from "L'Orgue Mystique" (Tournemire), Chorale-Prelude, "Sing, My Tongue" (Edmundson), Carillon (Edmundson), Allegro from Symphony No. 6 (Widor).

Following a precedent established last season, the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists opened a three-recital festival last evening in Washington Chapel of Latter Day Saints, presenting Hester Smithey, organist of National City Christian Church. Tomorrow night there will be a joint recital by Winifred Chamberlain, of St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, and Florence E. Reynolds, of Brookland Methodist Church; and on Saturday night Conrad Bernier, of the Catholic University of America, will close the series. Attendance at the opening showed that the public fully appreciates the generosity of the guild in freely dispensing good organ music.

BROWN

Mrs. Smithey played with technical proficiency and effective registrations a short program by German, French and American composers. She began quite naturally with the most illustrious virtuoso-composer for the instrument, Sebastian Bach, selecting his B minor prelude and fugue and two of his preludes based on chorales: "Ich ruf' zu dir, Herr Jesu Christ" and "In dir ist Freude." Her exposition of the fugue had clarity and precision, and her readings of the chorale-preludes expressed the moving supplication of the first and the abounding joy of the second.

From Charles Arnould Tournemire's "L'Orgue Mystique," a collection of 51 offices for the liturgical year, she chose the thirtieth cycle. A pupil of Cesar Franck and Vincent d'Indy, Tournamire absorbed from the former mystical tendencies which he sometimes carried to the point of self-conscious eccentricity. Franck's mysticism was inherent in his character, but in Tournamire it seems to be an acquired trait which led him to strain after unusual harmonies and spectacular effects.

The other French composer of Mrs. Smithey's choice was Charles Marie Widor, whose ten symphonies are among the masterworks of organ literature. She played the vigorous and brilliant allegro from the sixth symphony as the concluding number of her program. The American composer represented was Garth Edmundson, whose poetic imagination was disclosed in the chorale-prelude on "Sing, My Tongue," and whose skill in intricate writing was evident in a colorful carillon.

A Hollywood Britisher Does More Than His Bit

Cary Grant Renders Valiant War Service; Katharine Cornell Honored in New York; This, That and the Other About the Theater

MANY WEEKS AGO veiled allusions were made here to a Hollywood actor who put up a stiff battle for a fee of $150,000 for making a single picture and won his debate. Once the salary squabble was settled, his declaration was: "Now I don't want a cent of that money. Give it all to the British War Relief. I can get along all right on what I already have." At the time that was published, we were under oath not to divulge the identity of the actor. Now, it seems, his name may be disclosed.

BELL

That magnanimous mime was Cary Grant, coming to the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday as costar with Irene Dunne in "Penny Serenade." That "penny" part of the title must sound pretty paltry to Mr. Grant.

Cary Grant, born Archibald Alexander Leach, in Bristol, England, on January 18, 1909, is not a naturalized American citizen. Neither has he as yet become eligible for active service on the home front. Even if he had, his present service to his country from America far transcends anything he might do in a plane, a tank or behind a bayonet.

The British War Relief will receive almost a quarter of a million dollars through this patriotic Englishman's generosity. Just to make the thing legal, whenever Grant wangles one of these fabulous contracts with the idea of donating his salary to the cause of his country, he retains the munificent sum of $1 for his own compensation.

Cary Grant abhors publicity in circumstances like these. I trust he won't hate me too soundly for printing this.

In recognition of Katharine Cornell's contribution to the theater, the Lotos Club gave a dinner for the actress-manager in its clubhouse, in New York, on Sunday evening. Guthrie McClintic, her husband in private life, also was a guest of honor. Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University, was toastmaster and Otis Skinner, dean of American actors, the principal speaker. Mr. Skinner, it will be recalled, was in Washington a week ago last night to view the metropolitan premiere of John Golden's production of "Theatre," starring his daughter, Cornelia Otis Skinner. Only four other women have been honored in this fashion by the Lotos Club in the 71 years of its existence. They are Mary Garden, Laurette Taylor, Amelia Earhart and Dorothy Thompson.

It Seems He Has Been Here Before

Comes a letter from Joe Whitley, in New York, concerning the artistry as a dancer of George Church, dizzying patrons of Loew's Capitol Theater this week with his amazing swirls, twirls, pirouettes and whatnot. Says Mr. Whitley: "Church played the Capitol a few seasons ago with the Fokine Ballet. It was Church's first appearance with the Fokine group and the ballet master was so confident of the ability of his new addition that just before his first number—which was Ravel's 'Bolero'—mostly heel work, he called him aside and gave him a special pair of shoes. They had soft rubber heels. Today Church is back at the Capitol for the first time since. This time he heads the bill at exactly ten times his former salary. Church has been compared with such fine artists as Paul Draper and Georgie Tapps. He has a much more substantial ballet background than either of them." It is interesting to remember that Church, after having been boxer and wrestler, did not take up dancing until after he was 21.

Broadway, if you care to stretch the point, almost to the breaking point, has nothing on upper Sixteenth Street. If New York could go mildly berserk over the revival of "Charley's Aunt," the Pierce Hall Players see no valid reason why the Capital should not get a comparable wallop out of a revival of Anne Nichol's "Abie's Irish Rose." So they are putting it on Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week out at Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, which is by way of being the geographical location of Pierce Hall.

"Quiet, Please—Hospital Zone"

Tickets now are on sale for the Washington Civic Theater's production of "Men in White." It will run in Wardman Park Theater the week of April 27, except for Thursday, May 1, when the house will be dark. The performance on Tuesday night, April 29, will be for the benefit of the D. C. Occupational Therapy Association. Leon Askin, of course, is directing the piece. The cast will be one of the Civic's best, now struggling valiantly with the mysteries of stethoscopes, operating tables, forceps, gauze masks and the like. They probably will seem to be real doctors and nurses when you view them.

The Marches Triumph in Guild Play

By Nelson B. Bell

"HOPE FOR A HARVEST." The Theater Guild presents Fredric March and Florence Eldridge in a new play in three acts by Sophie Treadwell. Staged by Lester Vail; settings by Watson Barratt. At the National Theater.

One of the most substantial hits of the season was disclosed in the National Theater last night.

Sophie Treadwell's new, three-act comedy-drama, "Hope For a Harvest," costarring Fredric March and Florence Eldridge—Mr. and Mrs. March in private life—possesses those warm qualities of human understanding, sympathy and mutual helpfulness that make it a particularly inspiring document at just this juncture in dislocated national and international affairs. It is richly, but not preponderantly humorous. Based on a premise of subsistence farming in the San Joaquin Valley, in California, it has undertones of "The Grapes of Wrath," without any of the ugliness—except possibly by implication—of the Steinbeck work. It combines graciousness with intense dramatic grip. There is romance, a little recrimination and a vast amount of reality in it. "Realism" would not at all be the word.

The basic theme of the play harks back to the pioneer spirit that made the Thatcher Ranch one of those fabulous domains of the Old West about which traditions grew. Changing times and the surrender of the "horse-and-buggy days" to the machine age, saw it divided and sold off, a little at a time, to a breed of immigrants who found sturdy rewards for hard work, while lineal descendants of the original owners were content to let their land rot and their crops diminish, with filing stations a sorry substitute for the iron will that had actuated their forebears.

A Woman Takes Command

Elliott Martin is the prime protagonist of the new order. He has become as sterile as his acres. Selling gas to motorists, a gallon at a time, seems to him an easy way out, until Carlotta Thatcher, her fortunes devastated by the war, returns from Paris to rehabilitate a portion of the estate that once had been the boast of the valley. She has an uphill time of it for a while. Her ideas—a recrudescence of the spirit that made this country great—are archaic, unworkable and fantastic. By a shrewd manipulation of her affairs, a keen grasp of the problems of the youngsters of the second generation, enmeshed in the prejudices of their warring elders, and sublime compassion and common sense she not only rehabilitates her land, but recovers a childhood love, reorders more than one threatened life and brings splendid order out of potential chaos.

This may sound a bit involved, but it is not at all, as unfolded upon the stage. The story is simply, directly and powerfully told. It is no stodgy and stuffy preachment. On the contrary, and very emphatically, it is an enlivening, engrossing and exhilerating evening in the theater for anyone with an eye to an admirable stage piece fluently told and eloquently acted.

The first act, naturally, is largely expository of future intent and the identities of the principal characters. The second is as pithy as it is entertaining and the third welds romance and a lover's logic into an interval of absorbing interest that never loses an opportunity to gloss over the seriousness of its import with a graceful flow of humor that is wholly captivating and charming.

Has Superlative Cast

All of this would amount to little or nothing if "Hope for a Harvest" were not as well played as it is. Under the supervision of Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner—who, as we have said numerous times before, virtually are the Theater Guild—Mr. March and Miss Eldridge have been given the advantage of a supporting cast in which some more expert carper than this one will have to find a flaw.

If one were called upon for so unpleasant a chore, he would have to say that Miss Eldridge's is the dominant character in the drama. Her Carlotta Thatcher is played with an unobtrusive humor, a complete graciousness and such a wealth of charm that it becomes the dominant figure in the vital sequences of the action. This is not at all to say that Fredric March is either subordinate or inferior. Elliott Martin, in his hands, is a wholly believable victim of circumstances who reacts, finally, in fine fashion to the love of his youth, who makes plain the stupidity of the prejudices he has nurtured so long.

Alen Reed a Bulwark

Alan Reed, as Joe De Lucchi, the Italian farmer who has made so much of what Martin could make so little, is a tower of strength among the contributory players. His is the gift of making what might have been a subsidiary role one of major importance and worth. Arthur Franz and Judy Parrish, as the two young lovers, whose happiness is threatened by that usual mesalliance—the same one that gave "The Corn Is Green" one of its chief sources of appeal—also hold to the high level of their more prominent associates. Helan Carew and Doro Mirande are among the others who do most to make "Hope for a Harvest" one of the genuinely exciting events of the year on E Street.

Theresa Helburn, Lawrence Langner, with Katharine Hepburn in their charge, and others of note were in the audience which last night accorded the new play a thunderous reception. Washington once again is fortunate. New York will not see "Hope For a Harvest" until next season.

Gagift

FREDRIC MARCH,
last seen on a local screen in "So Ends Our Night," who this week costars with his wife, Florence Eldridge, in the Theater Guild production of Sophie Treadwell's new play of "Hope For a Harvest," at the National. This comedy-drama, which opened last night on E Street, is being offered in Washington prior to its Broadway premiere, scheduled for next fall

'Quite clearly' Albert told Goering in French, 'it is difficult to get through the sleeve.' Goering stared at him—because the French word for sleeve is 'manche,' which also means 'channel.'"

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 21 (INS).—George Brent might as well get busy studying his Canadian Royal Air Force regulations, for come June, he goes to Canada to be starred in Norman Reilly Raines' screen play, "The Shadow of their Wings," an air-thriller describing how the Canadians are trained and what is being done to help England protect her country. Canada is becoming as important, from the good-neighbor standpoint, as Mexico and South America.

They were engrossed in each other at the Grace Hayes' Lodge; Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow at the Mocambo, holding hands and dancing every dance; Sonja Henie, with Dan Topping at the opening of the Ice-Capades, bowing and waving to McGowan and Mac as they skated by her box.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Any day now, we'll be told by the press-box theorists that the second-year jinx is operating against young Sid Hudson, who has been knocked out of the box in his first two starts of the season. It will be a simple explanation: The book is packed with cases of first-year stars who fell on evil times in their second season in the big leagues, and Hudson is the latest victim of the hex.

POVICH

Poppycock! Hudson isn't being jinxed. He has simply been licked twice by the Red Sox—the best hitting club in the league—because he didn't have a wrinkle on his curve ball. His pitching has been no worse than at the same stage of the season last year when he lost 9 of his first 11 starts. If there is a second-year jinx in his case, it's a rebirth of his troubles last spring.

For every freshman player in the big leagues who may have encountered an off-season in his second year, there are a half-dozen who played better ball. Ted Williams, of the Red Sox, was troubled by no second-year hex and Lou Boudreau, of the Indians, zoomed to the top of the league shortstops in his second season. Dominic DiMaggio is beginning his second year with a burst of hits and Barney McCoskey's second year at Detroit was brilliant.

Most every top-notch pitcher in both leagues lost their opening starts this season, but in their cases there was no attempt to justify what happened by calling it a hex. Dutch Leonard, Buck Newsom, Red Ruffing, Bob Feller, Bucky Walters and Kirby Higbe all went down to a first-game defeat, and it was noted simply that they were licked. But against Hudson, a jinx is supposed to be in force. How do you spell balderdash?

Hudson, himself, cheerfully admits that he didn't have anything on the ball in the two games he lost. His fast ball simply wasn't fast enough, and after a few experiences, he was afraid to trust his curve or side-arm pitch. "I'm not in the groove yet," he says. "Had the same trouble last year when I wasn't hitting any of the corners. I didn't get straightened out for six weeks last year, but I think I'll make faster time than that."

Was there a touch of overconfidence in Hudson's pitching thus far this season? There might have been, he says. "Perhaps I did get to thinking I was a star, and didn't bear down like I did late last season, but if I did think that way I was a fool. I've got to keep pitching in there if I want to get these big league hitters out. I know that, now. But I don't think it was overconfidence. I wasn't pitching well. Darned if I don't think I could have hit .500 myself against the stuff I was throwing up there. Nothing broke well for me."

Manager Bucky Harris is not too disturbed over his pitching aside from the relief department. Dutch Leonard's two defeats were games he could have won with better support, and offsetting Hudson's slow start is the entirely unexpected performance of Ken Chase. The first Washington pitcher to win a game, and the first to go nine innings, Chase for the first time in his six years with the club promises to be no dead weight in the spring. In past seasons, he has never been of any great value to the club until July.

With Washington booming, Clark Griffith could count upon his most profitable season outside of his pennant winning years if, perchance, Bucky Harris came up with a first-division ball club. Until the blow of the Selective Service draft hit the Washington infield, the Nats had definite first-division possibilities. There has been much in the play of the team to recommend it despite the loss of five of its first six games.

Walter Masterson gave evidence of being a source of pitching help despite his defeat at Boston, and Jimmy Bloodworth's play at second base has transformed the club into a stand-out double-play combination. Lewis has been playing third base better than he knows how, and George Archie is proving thoroughly adequate at first base.

The outstanding item of improvement, however, is manifesting itself daily to Griffith Stadium fans and that is the club's outfield. Roger Cramer and Ben Chapman have transformed the Nats' outer defense from a loose-knit, inept department into a ball-hawking, speed-to-spare trio that is giving the Washington pitching a tremendous break. Cramer's throwing arm promises to save a half-dozen games. Whenever the club gets decent pitching, it can win.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 21.—What interests you today?

BASEBALL?—Hats off to Walter O. Briggs, the owner of the Detroit Tigers. Briggs has notified Hank Greenberg that he will be paid his full 1941 salary, believed to be $50,000, even though he is drafted into the Army in the very next batch of conscripted men. It is a generous, patriotic decision on Briggs part. But it isn't likely that it will set a precendent. Some owners can't do what Briggs has agreed to do. Others won't. These latter will be within the law, for a baseball contract is legally good for only 10 days anyway.

CONSIDINE

Until Briggs came through, it looked as if Greenberg would take the biggest pay cut since Babe Ruth was slashed from $75,000 to $52,000 in 1933. Now, it develops, that he is getting a $21 a month raise, to not play baseball, which reminds us that it has been suggested that Hugh Mulcahy, of the Phillies, welcomed his own induction into the armed forces because the $21 a month represented a boost in pay for him over his pittance as a Phillies employe.

It will be interesting to see what happens to the salaries of drafted men after their year in khaki. Even Briggs might be reluctant to start Greenberg at his old salary, knowing that he is one year closer to the end of his short prime, and knowing too that it will take him a couple of months of the regular 1942 season to get unrusty.

The Tigers are almost certain to sink, artistically and financially, without him. Pay cuts, not raises, will be the order for the 1942 Tigers, and for all other teams whose standings are hurt by departed draftees.

FOOTBALL?—Notre Dame has set some kind of a new high in cautiousness by asking the newsreel companies to stop lending reels of the Boston College-Tennessee Sugar Bowl game to clubs and fraternal organizations. Seems that the films are so good that they plainly disclose all the whys and wherefors of Frank Leahy's grid system. In other words, the films are a preview of the exact manner in which the Irish team will function next season under new Coach Leahy. In asking the newsreel companies to bar the films Notre Dame hopes that it will keep them away from the eyes of the spotters, spies and scouts of the teams Notre Dame plays in 1941.

RACING?—New York went through a full thoroughbred racing season in 1940 without a single "positive" result of its thousands of saliva tests. It is the first time that a State has had a record like this since Joe Widener brought to the United States this old French method of proving whether a horse has been injected with narcotics before a race. The only "positive" in New York came to light at a trotting track, and Government men had the goods on the culprit within a week. But the thoroughbred game was absolutely free of this vicious practice.

The breed of horses may not be improving, but from the results of 1940's saliva tests the breed of the men who handle horses seems to be on the up, if not on the up and up.

TENNIS?—The "leftish" members at Forest Hills have mellowed and relaxed their guard to the point of letting pros play on the hallowed grass courts of the stadium. June 6, 7 and 8 have been set aside for a professional round robin tournament, featuring Don Budge, Fred Perry, Bill Tilden and perhaps Ellsworth Vines. Ten per cent of the gate will be donated to British war relief.

The indignant Tories of the club are expected to meet this week to appropriate funds for a can of black paint to apply to the windows on their part of the club, so they will be spared the sight of tennis players taking money in the open at Forest Hills.

SPORTSWRITING?—We met America's only legitimately subsidized sportswriter the other day. He is F. Wallace Taber, a pleasant young man who is being underwritten this year to the extent of $2,000 and traveling expenses by Wildlife Institute. Perhaps you remember that the game conservation people advertised some months ago for a young man to submit to being taught the principles of writing a good fish and game column. Well, sir, not to mention P. S., Taber got the job.

He went to school at San Diego State College, Texas A. and M.,

Dick Chapman, 'No Evader,' Resigns Job

U. S. Amateur Titlist Quits Alabama Job

Amateur Titleholder Leaves Immediately For Home Board in Greenwich, Conn.

By the Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., April 21.—Richard D. (Dick) Chapman, National Amateur golf champion, resigned today as an assistant athletic director at the Southeast Air Corps training center because of what superiors termed "great concern over articles" attributing his acceptance of the job as "a desire to evade" the draft.

CHAPMAN

Chapman's recent acceptance of the post caused immediate differences between him and his Greenwich, Conn., draft board. It declined last week to change his 1-A classification, which Chapman said amounted to overruling "their own examining physician."

The 28-year-old golfer told newsmen here he "never had a chance of being accepted straight-out for military service" because Walter Reed Hospital found him "full of allergies and subject to hay fever in an acute form."

Announcement of Chapman's resignation, released by the training center, said he was returning immediately to Greenwich, Conn., where he will report to the Selective Service Board "for such disposition as the board decides upon."

Chapman had been instructed to report in Hartford, Conn., last Wednesday for induction into the draft army, but Brig. Gen. Walter R. Weaver, Southeastern center commandant, announced Tuesday he had employed him as an athletic director here.

Cocoa's Right To Chin Stops Sutka in 10th

By Tony Neri.

Louis (Kid) Cocoa, colored Puerto Rican welterweight, caught Joey Sutka, of Detroit, with a hard right flush on the chin in the last round of their ten-round fight last night to score a knockout in 1 minute 20 seconds of the round at Turner's Arena before a mere 737 paid admissions.

It was the first time Sutka had been knocked out in 61 fights. The Detroit Polish boy had made a fine comeback in the late rounds after the Puerto Rican had piled up a comfortable margin on points in the early rounds.

Cocoa put into good use a newfound punch. The fighters had just come out of a clinch and exchanged brisk blows when the colored boy landed the dynamite right hand that dropped Sutka. The end took the disappointing crowd by surprise.

Sutka weighted 153¾ and Cocoa 150. The latter ruled favorite at 7 to 5.

Fight Isn't Rough.

The fight was devoid of any roughness. Both boys showed a willingness to mix it and continued to give the fans a run for their money for the entire ten rounds. Billed as a fight in which a scientific boxer was meeting a slugger—it turned out to be slugger against slugger as the pair flailed away at each other.

The Cocoa Kid wasted no time in bringing in play his long experience in the game. He kept the Polish boy on the go with his long-reaching left. The shorter Sutka had trouble getting inside and the Cocoa Kid just kept tapping him with his left.

Sutka showed flashes of promise. He caught Cocoa on the chin with clean rights in the fifth and sixth rounds, but Cocoa gave him no opportunity to follow up his blows.

It was in the seventh round when Sutka hit Cocoa Kid the hardest blow, a looping right which jarred the Puerto Rican and looked momentarily as if he would be dropped to the floor. The bell was a life-saver to Cocoa.

Sutka continued to carry the fight to Cocoa in the eighth with his potent rights and short left hooks.

Brookman In Draw

El Brookman, popular Washington middleweight, emerged the winner of the eight-round semifinal after a tough and gruelling fight with New York's Harvey Massey. It was a split decision with Referee Reynolds casting the deciding vote in favor of Brookman. The decision was greeted with a round of boos.

Buc Hurler Reports To Draft Board

Nats Buy Bill Zuber, Tribe Relief Hurler

Waiver Price Brings Right-Hand Speedball Veteran

Bucky Harris' frantic search for a relief pitcher yesterday netted the Washington club Bill Zuber, tall, hard-throwing right-hander who for eight years has been an unspectacular chattel of the Cleveland Indians.

Washington paid the waiver price of $7,500 for Zuber. The deal for the player began several weeks ago when Clark Griffith made an outright cash offer of $7,500 for the pitcher. The Indians turned down that offer at the time, and placed Zuber's name on the waiver list. When no club except the Nats claimed him, General Manager C. C. Slapnicka made the sale to Washington.

Zuber, a 6-foot-2½-inch right-hander, will report to the Nats immediately and will see action with the Washington club at the first need of relief pitching, according to Harris. The Nats' manager, who is outraged by Washington's relief-pitching department which has failed in every game thus far this season, welcomes the addition of Zuber.

One Ray of Light

"At least he can throw hard," said Harris.

Twenty-six years old, Zuber has been the property of the Cleveland club virtually since he broke into organized ball in 1932. With the Indians, he never was able to graduate to a regular job. Last year he received credit for only one victory, and was charged with one defeat. He appeared in 17 games and pitched only 24 innings, mostly in relief roles.

Cleveland managers have been bearing with Zuber since he first joined the club in 1936 from the Indians' New Orlenas' farm, chiefly because of the speed he owns. Wildness, however, has been a consistent trouble of Zuber. In four seasons with Cleveland or parts thereof, his record shows four victories against five defeats.

Zuber got his organized baseball start with Grand Rapids in the Missippi Valley League in 1932 and has served on six other clubs of the Cleveland farm system. His best season in the minors was at Zanesville in 1936 when he won 17 games and lost 8.

He shuttled back and forth between Cleveland, New Orleans, Milwaukee and Buffalo until 1939 when he finally hung on with the Indians as a relief man. He's a newlywed.

Player's Strange Head Bump Turns Out to Be a Toad

By the Associated Press

Lake Charles, La., April 21.—Baseball fans, puzzled for years by the strange bulge in the cap of Jimmy Lawrence, manager of the Lake Charles Skippers in the Evangeline League, have discovered the cause.

"It's a live horned toad," said Lawrence. "I've worn a toad in my cap for the last four years. Not superstitious. It just feels good up there."

Lawrence said he developed a fondness for toads while playing football with the Horned Frogs at Texas Christian University.

Izzy Kaplan Beats Spoldi in Upset

New York, April 21 (INS).—Another long shot came home tonight when Izzy Kaplan, on the short end of 7-to-1 odds, surprised all hands by defeating Aldo Spoldi, of Italy, in a heated eight-round feature at St. Nicholas Palace.

Kaplan suffered a cut under his right eye in thethird and one under his left optic in the sixth. Although handicapped by the injuries, Kaplan finished the stronger of the two while Spoldi tired under the sizzling pace.

Spoldi scaled 139½ pounds and Kaplan 146½ pounds. The judges were Jack Goodman and Joe Brennan. Jed Gahan was referee.

Mrs. Meckley Easy Victor In Keeler Cup

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley won gross honors by eight shots and low net by two to completely dominate the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial Tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club.

The Kenwood Club player, who has won gross for the past five years in the season's intital tournament, broke 80 by a shot with a 38—41—79 and deducted four handicap strokes for a net 75.

Mrs. Leo Walper, the former District champion from Bannockburn, was next lowest in the starting field of 85 with an 87, and Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer, Columbia, had 88, while the other star players were all way off their expected form. Mrs. L. G. Pray posted an 89, Mrs. Myron Davy a surprising 92, while Mrs. Walter Stokes, Maryland State champion, did not turn in a card. Other scores under the 92 mark included a 90 by Mrs. A. A. McEntee and Mrs. M. K. Barroll's 91. Mrs. Meckley preferred the low net prize, leaving gross to Mrs. Walper.

Mrs. Richard Thornburg, also of Kenwood, who won 12 gross and three match play prizes during the 1940 season, won second low net with nines of 46 and 49 for a 95, minus 18 handicap strokes for a net 77.

Sundra Wins Debut Here, Gives 11 Hits

Ex-Yankee Hurls Clever Ball, but Weakens Near End; Travis Batting Star

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The Nats found a pitcher yesterday who could hold a three-run lead against the Boston Red Sox going into the last inning. Steve Sundra was wavering at the finish, but at the finish he had a 6-5 victory to show for his first performance in a Washington uniform, and the Red Sox had their first defeat of the season.

In halting Boston's five-game winning streak, Sundra allowed 11 hits, but he did a clever job of it until the eighth, and in the ninth he stuck gamely to the wreckage of what might have been an easy triumph. In that last inning, the Sox, for the third time this season, were threatening to wipe out a three-run Washington lead.

Case Makes Great Catch

Sundra, who had given up two runs to the Red Sox in the eighth, was obviously tiring and he walked DiMaggio to open the ninth. The situation became threatening when Finney beat out a hit that Travis could only knock down. The runners advanced when Pete Fox grounded into the box. Jimmy Foxx made a bold bid for a home run, but he picked out deep right-center field for his 400-foot swat and George Case hauled it in, a run scoring after the catch.

In this crisis Joe Cronin singled to left to move another run home and put himself on base with the tying run. There were moans among the 5,000 in the stands when Sundra pitched three straight balls to Bobby Doerr and appeared to be in the act of walking him. But the former Yankee came through with a pair of strikes and then sealed his victory by causing Doerr to fly out to Ben Chapman.

Travis Is Batting Star

Quite a guy for the Nats yesterday was Cecil Travis who slapped out four straight hits against the pitching of Jack Wilson before that fellow was taken from the box in the seventh inning. Travis was deprived of a fifth straight hit only because Lou Finney raced far into right center to pull down his ninth-inning

Villanova Trackmen Defeat Catholic University, 67 to 58

Final Event Is Decisive For Wildcats

DiCarlo and Corbett Share Individual Honors; Visitors Score in Half Mile

Villanova won first and third places in the 880, final event on the program yesterday to defeat Catholic University, 67-58, in a close track meet at Brookland. No records fell but performances were generally good.

With the score favoring Villanova only by 58-57 going into the final half-mile race, the Wildcats clinched the victory when Hooper breezed home in front and teammate Keifrider placed third behind Johnny Weschler of C. U. Weschler was in the race up until the final 100 yards when Hooper put on a decisive spurt.

Joe DiCarlo, of Villanova, captured the 100, 220, 440 and broad jump to score 20 points and grab off individual honors. For the Cardinals Johnny Corbett, with victories in the mile and 2 miles, and Walter Makofske, with a first in the shotput and a second in the discus, were outstanding.

Save for a misfortune C. U. encountered in the low hurdles the meet hight have been decided in Villanova's favor by only one point instead of nine. Leo Wall, of the Cardinals, was out in front in the hurdles when he stumbled over a jump and finished third. Later it was discovered that the reason Wall probably tripped was that the hurdles had been put up wrong, with the middle ones only 10 feet apart instead of the customary 20.

G. W. Nine Clips Eagles' Wings By 15-14—Or Thereabout

By Jack Munhall

Mix up 27 hits, most of them cheap affairs, 16 errors, 6 bases on balls, a hit batsman and some screwy base running and you have the ingredients of the baseball hash George Washington and American University dished up yesterday on the East Ellipse.

No on seemed sure of the result but a spectator poll taken at the end of the 2 hours and 47 minutes travesty showed that George Washington won, 15-14. The vote was 2-1 and the deciding ballot was cast by "Lefty" McIntire, the ancient sandlot pitcher, who hung around the entire time, hoping to get into the game.

As best as could be learned, George Washington won the game by overcoming a 14-7 deficit with three runs in the eighth and five in the ninth, and the decisive tally was carried across on an attempted steal of home. Joe Gallagher, the former St. John's Prep athlete, arrived safely home in the ninth inning when A. U. Catcher "Dutch" Schulze dropped Pitcher Bill Garland's throw to catch Gallagher.

Only somber note among the hilarious proceedings was the spiking of G. W. Shortstop Bobby Gilham, who retired from the fray in the fourth.

Stitch Needed

Gilham, his toe gashed by the spikes of Carter Edmonds' shiny new shoes, was taken to George Washington Hospital, where one stitch was required to close the cut.

It was then that the game really started to get funny. For it seems that George Washington was caught short of infielders. Lee Lusby, regular second sacker, was scholastically ineligible while he made up a term paper, and Scoot Gudmundson, his chief replacement, as well as Pitcher Eddie Amendola, had been excused for the day. They wouldn't be needed, Coach E. K. Morris informed them.

When Gilham went out, Morris brought Lorenz Zimmerman in from right field to play short, but before the exhibition was over Morris had so juggled his infield that all but three players then in the lineup were seen at two or more positions. At that point those who were trying to score the game tossed their books away.

The Colonials used three pitchers, but McIntire didn't break into the lineup. Joe Comer, senior right-hander, made his first start on the mound for the Colonials and lasted until the fourth. He gave up four hits and three runs. Jack Redinger took over in the fourth and retired in favor of Frank McGinnis in the sixth after surrendering four safeties and five runs.

Credited for Game

At this juncture the score read, American U., 8; G. W. U., 5. So in contrast to his two predecessors, McGinnis' feat of allowing only six hits and six runs in the last four frames was so excellent that he emerged as the winning pitcher. The little Bill Garland, a right-hander, went the route for the Eagles and yielded 13 blows.

If you have read this far, you should not be bored with details, but it should be mentioned that American scored four runs in the seventh without hitting the ball out of the infield, and that G. W.'s clinching five-run outburst in the ninth was predicated on only three hits—two of them through the infield. Catcher Jim Dowd opened the Colonials' ninth by scratching a single off the glove of Third Baseman Phil Fellows. Johnny Picco duplicated that effort and then things really began to happen.

The first thing was Zimmerman's being nicked on the shoulder with a pitch and the bases loaded. Then Jack Fitzgerald, with his fourth hit of the ball game singled past third into left, and Dowd and Zimmerman scored. Then young Gallagher, who is known in sporting circles as a "money player," socked a drive to left field that skidded past Harry Newby and rolled so far that Zimmerman and Fitzgerald were able to tally the tying runs and Gallagher pulled up at third. He stayed there while Tommy Simpson threw out Pitcher McGinnis at first, but then he was off with Garland's windup and slid safely across home plate as Schulze dropped the pitch. And that was the ball game.

Well, anyhow, it was a nice afternoon to be out in the air.

Tom Yawkey Heatedly Denies Cronin's Job Is in Danger.

TOM YAWKEY

Bosox Owner States He's Never Considered Releasing Manager

Owner Tom Yawkey of the Boston Red Sox denied with some heat yesterday that Joe Cronin's job as manager of the team is in jeopardy. Yawkey was indignant at reports written out of Boston and published in Washington papers to the effect that he was contemplating the release of Cronin.

"Those stories are not only untrue but they are offensive to Cronin, one of the finest personalities in baseball," said Yawkey. "Never have I considered releasing Cronin and that fact could have been confirmed simply by putting the question to me."

Yawkey, who is now accompanying his league-leading team, declared the only question concerning Cronin which had been debated was whether Cronin would continue as a playing manager.

"Last winter when Joe asked me if I wanted him to continue to play, I told him it was a matter for him to decide. If he felt he could do the shortstop job justice, I told him to play," said Yawkey. "Look at him now. He's playing a great game at shortstop and with the bat. When Joe wants to stop playing, he'll let me know."

Hoya Saliors Lose Varsity, Jayvee Races

American International College, of Springfield, Mass., won both varsity and junior varsity eight-oared rowing races from Georgetown yesterday on a course off Potomac Boat Club.

In the feature Georgetown took the lead at the start and held it for about 200 yards. A. I. C., however, raised its beat from 36 to 38 at the halfway mark and pulled away to win by about three lengths. The winners' time was 4 minutes flat and Georgetown was clocked in 4:06.

It was A. I. C. all the way in the junior varsity race, the visitors flashing across the finish line about three lengths in front. A. I. C. was timed in 4:06 and the Hoyas in 4:15.

C. U. May Skip Medley, 2-Mile Relays at Penn

Catholic University may have to scratch its entries in the sprint medley and 2-mile relay races in the Penn Relays Friday and Saturday at Philadelphia, Coach Dorsey Griffith announced yesterday.

The illness of John Doyle, who has lost 18 pounds due to what is described as a stomach ailment, and the poor physical condition of Charlie O'Keefe, another dependable runner, may prompt Griffith to concentrate on the Mason-Dixon mile relay.

Griffith plans to test Doyle and O'Keefe in tomorrow's quadrangular meet at Brookland among C. U., American University, Bridgewater and Gallaudet. If they appear fit original plans for the Penn Carnival will be carried out, but otherwise the Cards will content themselves with defending their Mason-Dixon Conference mile relay title.

C. U.'s mile relay team will be picked from among Doyle, O'Keefe, Jim Malaney, Joe Street, Dick Fullam and Johnny Corbett. Should Doyle and O'Keefe be adjudged able to run, Griffith can form a strong 2-mile team composed of Corbett, Doyle, O'Keffe and Malaney.

Corbett in the 2-mile race will be C. U.'s only individual competitor in the Penn Relays.

Charlotte Hall Beats Briarley As Cady Stars

Special Dispatch to The Post

Ammendale, April 21.—Charlotte Hall Military Academy nine took a big step toward the Maryland prep school baseball championship here today when it pounded Briarley pitching for 16 safe hits and an 11-6 victory.

Big Frank Cady smashed out three doubles and a single in five trips as the winners took their first triumph after losing their opener. He was well-seconded by Gideon Dyson, the hurler who relieved Starting Pitcher Grandland in the second inning when the latter became too free with bases on balls. Dyson allowed only four safeties in his 7 1/3-inning stretch, collected three singles in five times at bat and scored four of the winning runs.

Off to a 3-run lead in the opening frame, and going into the second with a 4-0 advantage, Charlotte Hall saw its grip slip when Briarley pushed over a pair of counters in the bottom half of the second inning. Five runs in the third stanza, however, sealed the victory conclusively.

Joe Wood, Jr., Hurls; Yale Scores, 11-5

By the United Press

New Haven, Conn., April 21.—Joe Wood, jr., son of Yale coach "Smokey" Joe Wood, Boston's great pitcher of yesteryear, grabbed all the glory from his two brothers today as Yale defeated Colgate, 11-5, in the annual collegiate "battle of the Woods."

Joe, jr., went the route against Colgate and gave up ten hits, while Steve, Colgate pitcher, was sent to the showers in the seventh inning after giving up 11 hits to his father's team.

The other brother, Bob, played a fair game for Colgate at first base, getting one hit out of four trips to the plate. He struck out twice and flied out once.

All three aspire to big league ball and all hope to play some day in the American League—where their father played for both Cleveland and Boston. But Steve and Bob go into the Army when the present school year is over, both already having taken their physical examinations.

Talking about his sons' chances in the big leagues, Smoky Joe said: "They've got to be a little bit better than they are now, but I think they all have a chance. Which is the best of the three? Well, you'll have to ask somebody else, I'm afraid I don't know."

Rutgers Nine Meets Hoyas

Georgetown University's baseball team, now less highly touted than a couple of weeks ago when observers were comparing it with the best in the school's history, meets one of the toughest foes on its schedule at the Hilltop today at 2:30 in a game with Rutgers. After a defeat by Michigan and a close scare at the hands of Washington and Lee, the Hoyas must reestablish their claim to greatness.

Rutgers, with what is supposed to be its best team of all-time, is unbeaten in college competition and beaten only by Newark, 4-0, in an exhibition game. Against the Hoyas, who have won three of four games, the Scarlet will pitch their right-handed ace, Jim Perkins, who went 15 innings recently to defeat Colgate, and Steve Wood, hurling son of "Smoky" Joe Wood, the former Red Sox ace.

St. Albans Beats Johnny Netmen

St. Albans School took its second Prep School Tennis League triumph yesterday on its home courts, when it shut out St. John's, 5-0. In the singles Cooper beat Norris, 6—1, 6—0; Chewning beat Tarleton, 6—3, 6—2; and Lee defeated Bennett, 6—2, 6—4. Cooper and Chewning paired in the doubles to trip Norris and Tarleton, 6—2, 6—2; and Lee and Doyle were carried to three sets before beating Bennett and Cordell, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3.

"Tonight . . . you'll drink with history!"
Up in the Highlands of Scotland, the River Spey runs, crystal clear and cold, by the distilleries of W. & A. Gilbey, Ltd., largest individual wine and spirits merchants in the world. This is where I began, and from this historic river I get my name.
The major part of my life—like all good Scotch Whiskies—is spent inside sherry casks—aging for better flavour. Then, I'm blended with other fine Gilbey Scotches into one superior, smooth whisky called Spey-Royal . . . bottled, and shipped all over the globe.
First, I went to London, but as soon as we reached (censored), just outside the City, they put me down in the underground vaults. Seems there was quite a disturbance above; it turned out we were right on an estuary of the Thames.
As soon as I was delivered to the docks for shipment to your country, the Government took responsibility. I waited my turn for "bottoms," along with a great many other cases.
They almost got us, two days out of (censored). It was quite an experience. Several times I thought I'd be wasted on the ocean floor. But we got through, what?
When we reached neutral waters, the Admiralty notified Gilbey what ship I was on. Up to then no one knew where I was, when I'd sailed, or where I was to land. You see, it's quite a business getting over to the United States these days.
Because I'm sold on a different basis from other Scotch Whiskies, Gilbey has no primary importer, but sells direct to distributors all over the country. This eliminates what you call "middlemen" and keeps my price down. Thus, I ended up in several different cities.
It's really quite a thrill to see how people enjoy me. You Americans have the nicest homes and all of you seem to have good taste in other things as well as whisky. I heard one man say, "This is the most pleasant way of giving aid to Britain I know!"
P.S. Next time, at your favourite bar or package store, order Gilbey's Scotch. Everybody who knows Spey-Royal likes it.

DiMaggio Paces Yankees to 14-4 Victory Over Athletics

Star Pounds Out 4 Hits, One a Homer

Donald Gives 5 Hits As Yankees Get 17; Loss Is 5th in Row For Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 21.—The New York Yankees, again led by Joe DiMaggio, hammered out 17 hits today to crush the Philadelphia Athletics, 14 to 4, for the A's fifth straight setback.

DiMaggio knocked his fourth home run of the season into the stands in the second inning and missed another by a foot when a liner caromed off the sscreen in left center for a double. He also had two singles and drove in two runs and scored three.

Every Yankee except Pitcher Atley Donald made at least one hit and Joe Gordon also had a home run.

Donald started shakily, giving up five hits, including homers by Wally Moses and Frank Hayes in the first four innings, but he didn't allow a single safety in the last five frames.

Giants Beat Dodgers, 7-5, In 8th Inning

By International News Service

New York, April 21.—Jo-Jo Orengo played the hero's role today as the New York Giants took off on the victory trail again, putting down the Dodgers, 7 to 5.

Orengo slapped out a two-bagger with a pair of runners on base in the eighth inning. His hit broke a 5-5 deadlock, sending Hank Danning across with the winning run and placing Babe Young at third. Young iced the game by coming in on Kirby Higbe's wild pitch.

The Dodgers, whose triumph over the Giants yesterday was New York's first loss of the season, started a ninth-inning comeback when John Wittig, who had replaced Bump Hadley, issued two free passes. Bob Carpenter stifled this, however, by throwing only one ball to Joe Medwick, who slammed into a double play.

Brooklyn secured eight hits off Giant hurlers, of whom Wittig was credited with the victory. The Giants collected seven off Higbe, including Mel Ott's homer in the fifth. Dolph Camilli hit for the circuit for the Dodgers in the eighth.

and Mrs. W. S. Masten just missed the prize list with net 79s.

Mrs. Meckley, who holds the competitive course record over the Washington layout with a 76, needed four for a 77 coming to the eighteenth hole, but drove into a sand trap and finished with a six for the 79. The winner averted a bad starting hole by knocking a four wood shot on the edge of the green and shipping dead to the cup for a par, after opening with a topped drive.

After dropping a 10-foot birdie putt on the second hole and then taking six on the third with a penalty shot, Mrs. Meckley played near regulation golf up to the eighteenth hole, hitting her shots well and getting down in regulation putts.

Cocoa Kid Stops Sutka in Tenth

many in the small crowd thought the New York fighter had all the best of it.

Brookman rallied after a slow beginning and carried the fight to Massey. The latter was penalized two rounds for low blows, the fifth and eighth.

Massey had the Washington boy wobbly in the third round. The New Yorker, conqueror of Ernie Vigh some time back, employed a powerful right smash and had Brookman's nose bleeding in the early rounds.

Massey weighed 159 pounds and Brookman 152.

After hitting the deck four times in the first round and going down again in the next round, Paul Kriewald, of Baltimore, was a technical knockout victim of Jabo Kenner, giant colored heavyweight of the District. The Baltimore fighter came out of his corner like an infuriated bull and was promptly dnslapped to the canvas. The bout, best of a card of good preliminaries, had the house in an uproar. Time of knockout was 25 seconds of the second round.

In the second bout of the night, originally scheduled as the opener, Flash Lightning, of Philadelphia, scored a technical knockout over Washington's Jackie Cranford in 2 minutes of the third round. Referee Bowen stopped the fight as Cranford sagged to his knees near his own corner. Cranford weighed 158, Lightning 164.

Jeffra Beats Labarba in Slow Fight

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 21.—Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, recognized as pion in Maryland, outpointed Henry the world's featherweight cham-Labarba, of Baltimore, tonight in a dull ten-round bout.

Jeffra, returning to action after an extended layoff, gained the decision easily, but was unimpressive. Tne champion's timing was poor and his general form was spotty. Jeffra weighed 127 and Labarba 130.

Sol Bartola, Boston featherweight, defeated Dave Crawford, of Brooklyn, in another ten-rounder. Bartola weighed 128 and Crawford, 130.

Queen Is Selected For Drake Relays; She's a Blonde

DOROTHY ELIZABETH BALL

By the Associated Press

Des Moines, Iowa, April 21.—A willowy 20-year-old blonde with sparkling blue eyes, will rule over the annual Drake relays here Friday and Saturday.

Editors of the 1941 Quax, Drake yearbook, announced the Houston girl's selection as queen of the thirty-second track and field carnival from among candidates of 21 colleges and universities.

A senior majoring in textile design, a campus leader at Texas, who looks for a career in interior decorating if the right "tall, well-built" man doesn't come along first, Miss Ball will arrive here Friday morning to start a round of festivities.

Senate Softballers Beat Yellow Cab, 10-4

Senate Beer softballers, with Billy Sullivan and Ben Harold doing the hurling, got their first taste of competition yesterday at Edgewood Playground, where they trounced Yellow Cab ten, 16-3. Johnny White and Barney Wallenstein paced the offensive with three hits apiece.

Today the Beermen meet F. and C. Construction and tomorrow they meet Yellow Cab again. Both clashes will be at Edgewood.

Convention Hall Pin Race Near Deadlock

George W. Cochran and Tru-Blu bowlers pulled within a game of the leading C. H. Wolfe team in the Convention Hall League. The Cochran team posted highs of 583 and 1,707 while the best individual totals were turned in by Dutch Putnam, 144-370 and Ed Turia, 134-365.

Spencer's Drives Help Win Match, 2-1

Cliff Spencer, the East Potomac pro who is known as the longest driver in this section, pounded out two tremendous tee shots yesterday at Army and Navy, driving the ninth and seventeenth greens, both par four holes.

Spencer and East Potomac Manager Tommy Doerer, jr., won a match over the Service Club team of Pro Allan Burton and Ralph Bogart, the city amateur champion, 2 and 1. The winners had a best-ball 68 with Spencer's 70 low for the day.

Spencer tagged a tee shot on the ninth hole, where the average golfer has a six-iron shot left for a second, which rolled almost over the green, some 40-feet past the cup. He barely missed his eagle putt and holed an easy birdie three. The hole measures 307 yards on the card, all uphill, but is believed closer to 350.

Coming to the dog-leg seventeenth hole Spencer did not take the safe way to the green by playing a short wood shot into the opening and then a short iron to the green. Instead, he plasted a drive the short way, over the trees, and it landed on the green, some 15 feet from the cup. He holed the putt for an eagle two.

Bogart, who has long played in fast golf company despite his 21 years, called the two drives the longest he had ever witnessed.

CHEVY CHASE

Host Pro Bob Barnett and Tony Penna, the good-will golf pro who is spending some time in the District, were too good for Lew Worsham, Burning Tree and Al Jamison yesterday at Chevy Chase, winning an informal match, 3 and 2. Barnett and Worsham had 72 each, three over par.

Phillies Bow To Bees, 8-1; Ferrell Stars

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 21.—The veteran, Wes Ferrell moved a long way on the comeback trail today as he set the Phillies down with five hits while the Boston Bees battered three Philadelphia moundsmen for an 8-to-1 victory.

It was the second triumph for Ferrell, who beat the Phillies a weak ago in a relief role. The only run off Wes came on lead-off man Joe Marty's homer in the first inning.

Carvel Rowell, with two doubles and a single, and Max West, with a homer and two singles, led the Bee onslaught.

In the eighth, Gene Moore, outfielder, was hit on the left hand by Relief Pitcher Vito Tamulis and had to leave the game.

Sobriquet Captures Lansdowne Purse at Havre de Grace

$27.80 Shot Beats Out Ocean Blue

Big Stakes Runs Third in Feature; Two Derby Hopes Fail to Impress

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 21.—Sobriquet, forgotten when nominations for the big 1941 stakes were made, carried the colors of the Christiana Stable to a length and a half victory today in the Lansdowne Purse. Carrying a $27.80 price tag, the son of Quatre Bras II showed no respect for two Kentucky Derby hopes, Ocean Blue, making his 1941 debut with Owner Crispin Oglebay watching, was second, beaten a length and a half. Arnold Hanger's Big Stakes, 3½ lengths behind the winner, was third. Stolen Tryst and Primarily were shunted into the "also ran" department.

Ocean Blue was making only the third start of his racing career. He won and then finished third in two starts last year. Jockey Ira Hanford rode him today. The son of Blue Larkspur was not off very well but Hanford took him up to run head and head with Sobriquet. It looked like another of the many favorite victories when Ocean Blue stuck to his running guns into the straightaway.

Winner Draws Clear

At this point, however, Apprentice D. Madden shook up Sobriquet and the gelding responded by passing Ocean Blue and drawing clear gradually. Hanford tried to keep his mount going, but Ocean Blue appeared to need racing. Big Stakes, last away, made up some ground early and then hung the remainder of the distance.

The time of 1:13 3-5 was ordinary for the class of horses and was bettered a fifth of a second by Bobby Curran's Flaming High, winner of the fourth event.

The shortest daily double of the Maryland season to date was the result of victories by favorites in the first and second races. An army of customers lined up and collected $7.40 for each $2 investment. R. Sterling Clark's Cotchis made good in the first race and paid $4.10. Jouett Shouse's Joanny won the second race at a mere $3.30 payoff.

Belmore Is Elected Tech Boxing Captain

Blacksburg, Va., April 21 (AP).—Kent Belmore, junior from Crozet who went to the finals in the recent Southern Conference tournament, has been elected captain of Virginia Tech's 1942 boxing team.

Belmore, fighting in the 165-pound class, registered five victories against two defeats this season.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLCHIS, $4.10, $3.00, $2.50; GATE POST, $8.60, $4.40; POST HASTE, $3.80.

COLCHIS, off in the first flight and not hurried during the early stages, responded gamely when placed to a drive and took command to win easily. GATE POST was rushed to contention on the outside, disposed of SWEET ZACA to get to the front, but was no match for the winner. POST HASTE worked his way to serious contention and then weakened. MISS I. Q. was hemmed in on the rail early and went evenly when clear.

NAVIGATION was off in the first flight and closed with good energy under strong handling. PLEASANT LADY was off in front, set a strong pace under hustling tactics and was tiring at the end. SHOWABAL was in a tangle early, came out for racing room, moved up menacingly and then hung.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

If Trainer Tom Smith, of the C. S. Howard Stable doesn't watch out, horsemen will be picketing his barn with signs reading, "Smith Is Unfair to Other Trainers." Before the entries closed yesterday, Smith spread a report that he was shipping Porter's Cap and Mioland to Kentucky where the former is to run in the Derby. So convinced were several scribes that they printed the story in early editions only to be told by Smith later that it was a joke and that he wanted to get Mioland in a race called the Guilford Purse. Smith knew that other trainers would not put their charges in if they believed Mioland would run. Despite Smith's efforts the race did not fill. Only the Tower Stable's Royal Man was entered. Later Smith said Mioland was even going to Kentucky but that Porter's Cap would be shipped on Thursday. Smith is anxious to get a race under Mioland's belt. The horse has been working well but is not eligible for any stakes here and horsemen don't want to cause him around the track in the afternoon. Mioland's next engagement is in the Dixie Handicap at Pimlico. Willie Canning, the apprentice rider who was hurt when Third Try crashed into the fence here last week, is coming along nicely. X-rays failed to show a break in his ankle as was suspected. Donald Hamer, exercise boy for J. Fred Adams, was thrown during training hours this morning and suffered lacerations and bruises. Three carloads of jumpers arrived at Pimlico yesterday morning from Aiken and Camden, S. C. This shipment was divided as follows: Thomas Hitchcock, 9; O. T. Dubassoff, 16, and James E. Ryan, 15. Arthur White arrived from Middleburg, Va., with 15. The group included Annibal and Ossabaw, outstanding jumpers expected to meet in the Jervis Spencer Steeplechase Handicap on May 2 at Pimlico. William Jones, amateur rider and trainer of Marion Du Pont Scott's steeplechase string, made his first appearance at Pimlico this morning. Jones has a strong hand in the steeplechase picture and expects to have at least one starter in the Spring Maiden Steplechase which will be one of two stakes decided on opening day, April 28. Richard Springer, exercise boy for J. Y. Christmas, was thrown from a 2-year-old Sunday morning and suffered a broken leg.

BILL.

First race—JAMES PAL when right could handle this kind. That recent effort was an encouraging one and I'm going to string along. KNOXVILLE seems to be the solid horse in the company and should be a keen factor. CREDENCE has had poor racing luck on two occasions and is dangerous.

Second race—SMART has been knocking around all spring and appears to have found the right spot in this field. Gets in light thanks to the apprentice allowance and I'm going to string along. TOWER MAID is said to be a good one and will be close. THIRD LEGION for the show end.

Third race—HI-LIGHT turned on a world of speed in that recent outing and appears capable of carrying 117 pounds to victory in this company. BRIGHTEN UP has shown good form on occasions and should be right in the pay in this field. STOP LOSS was a disappointment last out.

Fourth race—BEACON STREET probably was short in that recent outing. Meets about the same kind here and I'm going to string along. SWYNSTAN and GINO BEAU have been heavily played recently and they promise to fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—FETTACAIRN was scratched Saturday with this event in mind. Must carry 118 pounds, but definitely is the class of the field. SKY LANE is tossed in with light weight and will be a keen factor. FAIR HERO won at Bowie.

Sixth race—NOSY bowed to DIZZY DAME by a nose at Bowie, but I look for the order to be reversed when they clash today. Both have a modest weight assignment. DON PECOS, despite 117 pounds, will be prominent.

Seventh race—STURDY DUKE is as fit as hands can make horses and looks like money from home in this field. ANNIKIN gets in with 105 pounds and may be second ahead of MEMORY BOOK.

Eighth race—OUR FLORENCE is the speed and the class of this party and there is no reason for mistakes. CARRIAGE TRADE'S last was' a good try. ROUGH NEWS will be in the pay circle in this field.

Best bet—HI-LIGHT.

Riddle's Entry Runs One, Two

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., April 21.—Samuel Riddle's entry of War Relic and Lord Kitchener ran one-two today in the featured 6-furlong race for maiden 3-year-olds at Narragansett Park.

War Relic won by 3¼ lengths, while stablemate Lord Kitchener, which cost Riddle $20,000 at the Saratoga sales in 1939, had a nine-length advantage over third-place Gal Way.

Spanish Duke Wins Feature At Jamaica

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Racetrack, N. Y., April 21.—Ringing the bell for the first time in seven 1941 starts, R. C. Thatcher's Spanish Duke, with Carroll Bierman up, scored a popular triumph in the Sunnyside (Class C) Handicap of a mile and a sixteenth here this afternoon. The $5.40-for-$2 choice in a field of six spurted in the final furlongs, staging and undeniable bid that saw him first past the wire by a length and a half. The colt was clocek in 1:46 flat.

W. C. Winfrey's 6-year-old, One Jest, provided chief opposition. She was easily second, three lenghts in advance of the tired pacemaker, B. F. Christmas' Here Goes. Bindr and Navy had scant chance in the bad start, but the former managed to finish fourth. Ralph Eccard substituted for Nick Wall on Binder. Wall was hit in the eye while at the gate for the previous event. His mount in that race, Miss Q., threw her head back and Wall could not dodge the blow. He canceled his remaining mounts of the day.

With balmy weather continuing, another banner crowd was present for the sport. The count was 13,571.

Spanish Duke was fourth away from the gate. He and the unreliable Volitant alternated behind the two early leaders. Here Goes and One Jest. Volitant made one threatening move near the end of the first half-mile, then gradually faded until he wound up last. Spanish Duke started his winning challenge on the outside of Here Goes and One Jest turning for home. He proved too good for One Jest in the final drive. Here Goes was an easy third.

Eastern-Rider, Tech-Wilson Games Today

Lincoln Park Nine Seems Equipped To Oust Central From Championship

Rested up, if not greatly improved by a layoff for the Easter holidays, four public school baseball teams of Washington today launch a stiff interhigh card which calls for an average of almost four games a week until the championship series between Eastern and Western Division titlists June 3-6.

Eastern, runner-up to Central for two straight years, plays host to Roosevelt in one interdivision clash and Wilson entertains Tech in the other. Both start at 3:30.

If Eastern is ever to overcome the jinx Central seems to hold over it, this would appear to be the year. Coach "Chief" Guyon has another of his outstanding teams well drilled, though most of the players are inexperienced. Central, on the other hand, has had only a few days' practice for its public school opener Friday against Roosevelt, and all its punch has been stolen by graduation.

All Coach Guyon's forces will have to survive is the serious threat of at least two other teams in what looms as the tightest interhigh race in years—Tech and Western. Either has the potential strength to take everything. Eastern and the defending champion notwithstanding.

Webb to Pitch

A single series game has been played so far, and it will be the losing pitcher in that one who carries Wilson's hopes for its first triumph into today's game with Tech. Steady Nino Briscuso, control artist, will face Tech's Buddy Webb. On the mound the teams will be on a level, but the Maroons' power at the plate will probably tell the tale in Tech's favor.

Kenny Curles, the youthful sensation who shone in the latter part of last year, will probably get the assignment for Eastern. His opponent for Roosevelt has not been named.

In support of the interhigh card, three other games will be played today, featured by Central's first game of the year at George Washington High, in Alexandria. Montgomery Blair, of Silver Spring, also gets under way by playing host to Sherwood High, and Washington-Lee's nine moves down to Richmond University for a battle with the frosh.

Indianapolis Sets Double-Play Record In Beating Blues

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, April 21.—Indianapolis and Kansas City set a new American Association record for double plays in one game today as they executed seven twin killings during a 4-2 Indianapolis victory over the Blues.

The old record of six double plays in one game was set by Milwaukee and Louisville July 30, 1929, and equaled by Toledo and Indianapolis September 9, 1934.

Kansas City completed three of the double plays today and four were by Indianapolis.

Sundra Halts Bosox Streak, Nats Win, 6-5

The Nats won the game in the seventh inning when they bolstered a 2-1 lead with a four-hit four-run assault on Wilson that drove him from the box and brought into action Joe Dobson. The nub of Wilson's trouble was four straight hits by Lewis, Travis, Bloodworth and Archie. A muff of a ground ball by Cronin late in the inning gave the Nats their last run which proved to be the important one.

It might have been a thoroughly easy victory for the Nats save for the maraudings of Boston's outfield. George Archie, Rick Ferrell, George Case and Travis were deprived of extra base hits by spectacular one-hand catches of Dom DiMaggio, Lou Finney and Pete Foxx.

Travis Bats Home a Run

Travis fetched home a run that gave the Nats a 1-to-0 lead in the first inning. After Cramer drew a walk and Chapman singled to center, Travis lashed out the first of his four hits—a single to left. In the second, the Nats upped their lead to 2 to 0 after Archie and Ferrell were cheated of extra-base blows by the brilliant catches of DiMaggio and Fox. Sundra walked with two out, Case beat out an infield hit, and Cramer singled to left to get the pitcher home.

Jimmy Bloodworth averted trouble for Sundra in the second inning after Cronin reached base on Lewis' wild throw, and Doerr followed with a double. Lewis made a clever play on Tabor's grounder to trap Cronin off third, and then Bloodworth scrambled behind second base for a sensational force play on DiMaggio's grounder.

Lou Finney's triple to center that opened the third inning inspired a Boston run at that point and the game rocked along at 2-to-1 figures until the seventh, when the Nats cut loose against Wilson.

Bloodworth Scores Pair

Lewis opened the seventh with a single to left and Travis contributed his fourth straight hit—a clever double over third base with the hit-and-run sign on. Jimmy Bloodworth bumped a single into left to score two runs and went to second when Fox bobbled the ball. Archie scored him with a single to left center and a bit later Archie got home from third base when Cronin muffed Case's grounder.

Trailing, 6-1, the Red Sox became obstreperous in the eighth when Jimmy Foxx led off with a tremendous triple into the centerfield corner and Cronin scored him with a single to right. With two out, Peacock doubled to left, but Sundra limited the damage to two runs. He was no ball of fire in the ninth, but he was the winning pitcher.

Thomson Advises Young Golfers Not to Imitate Him

Hitting for Distance Ruins Short Game, Warns Blond Slugger

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., April 21.—The longest driver in golfdom, slugging Jimmy Thomson, today advised youngsters not to emulate him if they would become top-flight tournament players.

'Long hitting has paid me real dividends," said the blond-thatched Chicopee, Mass., pro, "but in maintaining my reputation as a long hitter, I have been forced to sacrifice any chance I have had to win some of the better tournaments.

"I simply haven't found it possible to slug with the driver and hit 'em soft with the irons. To do that you'd simply have to develop two swings. So far I haven't been able to do so, but I'm still working."

Distance off the tee is nice if you can get it, Thomson admitted, and there were plenty of galleryites ready to agree with him after watching him slam several 300-yarders in tying the course record at Belle Meade Country Club with a 6-under par 65 in an exhibition match.

But, Jimmy continued, "I would advise the young golfer—or any golfer for that matter—not to try for great distance. You can hit the ball long up to a certain point and still be delicate with your irons, but when you start slugging with your driver, you're going to find that same tendency creeping into your iron play."

Husky and powerful as a youth, Thomson said his father, Wilfred, himself a golf pro, taught him the knack of long hitting.

"I thought it was smart to use a nine iron where the others used a six, so I worked, worked and worked on the practice tee and neglected my irons," he related.

"Then when I first started playing the tournaments, I was young and foolish and thought I could win them by knocking the ball a mile. I finally found out I could not, but by that time the folks in the gallery seemed to be following me around to watch me hit 'em a mile. So I just kept on doing it, and here I am—the man with a lot of muscles and no finesse."

Harvard Takes Stand on Race Discrimination

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., April 21.—Harvard's director of athletics, William J. Bingham, was ordered by the Harvard Corporation today to advise all athletic opponents that the university would countenance no racial discrimination.

Bingham had asked the corporation for a statement of policy after the barring of a Negro lacrosse player, Lucien V. Alexis, jr., of New Orleans, from the Harvard team in a recent game with the Naval Academy brought protests from several quarters.

In a letter to Bingham, the corporation expressed the opinion that "in the future the athletic committee should make it plain to other institutions with whom we are competing that it is Harvard's principle that there should be no racial discrimination among our students."

After the game with the Naval Academy, which Harvard lost, it was disclosed that Harvard first had the alternative of benching Alexis or accepting a forfeit from Navy. Rear Admiral Russell Wilson, superintendent of the academy, wired Bingham, who at first was inclined to accept the forfeit. However, Alexis did not play and Bingham later explained "we were the guests of the Naval Academy and had no choice in the matter. Had the game been played at Cambridge," he said, "I would have insisted that he be allowed to participate."

Navy is scheduled to play Harvard on the football field this autumn and Harvard has a Negro player, Ray Guild, of Cambridge.

Thompson Hits 100 Straight To Win Title

Special Dispatch to The Post

Salisbury, Md., April 21.—W. F. Thompson, of Boothwyn, Pa., topped an entry of 45 registered skeet-shooters yesterday with 100 straight, at the Tri-State Sportsman's Club field.

The runner-up of the two-day shoot was George Deyoe, Washington, D. C., member of last year's All-American First skeet team, with a score of 98x100. Both Thompson and Deyoe received silver trophies. Deyoe also is a member of the National Capitol Skeet Team which took the five-man team honors yesterday to win silver medals.

The Washington squad made 469x500 and besides Deyoe, the other members scored as follows: John S. Hawkins, 95x100; "Ruf" Watson, 93x100; L. A. Singer, 92x100, and Fred Ramsdell, 91x100.

Miss Constance Smith, also of Washington, took the ladies' championship with a score of 79x100, and Mrs. Dottie Holoworth, Baltimore, was runner-up with a score of 64x 100. Both received silver trophies.

Kitty Elliott, 12-year-old Fruitland school girl, stole the show by breaking 26x50 targets in men's competition. Kitty is the club mascot and never shot a gun until this spring.

E. J. Gore, Cambridge, Md., and W. F. Thompson were the two-man champion team, Gore shooting 95x 100, and Thompson 100x100, to win silver medals.

Centreville Nine Signs 12th Player

By the Associated Press

Centerville, Md., April 21.—With training sessions scheduled to begin Thursday, the Centerville Red Sox of the Eastern Shore League today boosted their player roster to 12 as three men were signed.

Those who penned contracts were Joe Piana, rookie right-handed pitcher from New York City; Wallay Small, pitcher, who was out on option last season, and Al Mocek, young outfielder who played here last year.

Business Manager Asbury Bartlett disclosed the loss of another performer to the Army. Joe Dziak, right-handed moundsman from Cleveland, Ohio, was ordered for immediate induction by his draft board.

Second Player Lost

Dziak is the second Centerville player to be lost through the draft route. Charley Norton, also a pitcher, was inducted several weeks ago.

Piana is without professional experience, but was hired on the recommendation of the Boston Red Sox. Small, who hails from Jersey City, N. J., was with the local club at the start of the 1940 season, but was optioned to Huntington, W. Va., of the Mountain State League, where he won six and lost nine games.

Nocek, a speedy flycatcher from Toledo, Ohio, batted only .246 last year, but showed considerable power with 11 home runs, 15 doubles and 55 runs driven in.

Five Other Pitchers

Also under contract are five other pitchers — Hank Dwyer, Hubert Barton, Johnny Verditto, Owen Cowan and Johnny Scheidmantel. For catching duty the Red Sox have Lou Comerotta, a youngster from Scranton, Pa.

Manager Ed Walls will handle second base; Joe Dicesaro, first, and Charley Shisila,. third. One other outfielder, Bill Lazor, will also report here this week.

Ray Robinson FacesGhnouley Here April 30

Ray (Sugar) Robinson, hard-punching former New York Golden Gloves champion and hailed by many as the next world's lightweight boxing champion, makes his debut at Uline's Arena a week from tomorrow night, April 30, when he faces Joe Ghnouley, clever St. Louis veteran, in a special eight-round semifinal support of the scheduled ten-round main event pairing off Steve Mamakos and Ernie Vigh.

Robinson, the greatest little Negro warrior to crash professional boxing since Henry Armstrong, has gone undefeated since deserting the amateurs and has knocked out a majority of his opponents with a tremendous right hand that bears a striking resemblance to Ceferino Garcia's celebrated bolo punch.

Ghnouley, one of the classiest lightweights in the country in the past several years, should provide Robinson with one of his severest tests since turning professional. The veteran St. Louis warrior not only is a master boxer but is lightning fast and capable of setting a terrific pace for his younger opponent.

Promoter Ray Alvis is introducing Robinson in a semifinal spot by special arrangement only, inasmuch as the former two time Golden Gloves champion is in widespread demand as a main eventer. In the event Robnson delivers up to expecttions he will be pointed for a major bout here in open air this summer.

Promoter Alvis yesterday decleared that his April 30 show should prove far and away the greatest fighting card of the season. Mamakos and Vigh, the main event principals, both specialize in two-fisted warfare while Robinson, the puncher, and Ghnouley, a fast and punishing boxer, should prove a happy combination.

High powered preliminaries equally as interesting will back up these outstanding bouts and will be announced shortly.

Among the leagues which will operate at the new park are the Capital City and Cosmopolitan on week nights, the Columbia on Saturday afternoons, two Sport Center Leagues on Sunday, and the Commercial Twilight and Building Trades Leagues during week days.

His 'Fares' Were Bandits

HENRY J. ANDERSON, 32-year-old taxicab driver, of 1212 K Street Northwest, whose vehicle was commandeered by two bandits after they robbed the loan office of H. C. Reiner, 1014 K Street Northwest, of $150 yesterday in broad daylight

Police Seeking Two in Holdup Of Loan Office

Police last night combed the city for two white bandits who walked into the loan office of H. C. Reiner, 1014 K Street Northwest, in broad daylight yesterday, robbed Reiner and an assistant of $150 and then led police in a chase in a taxicab they commandeered at Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, two blocks from the scene of the holdup.

The robbery took place about 2 p. m. and the cab was found abandoned two hours later in the 1200 block of C Street Northeast.

Its driver, Henry James Anderson, 32, of 1212 K Street Northwest, called police at 5 p. m. and reported that two men had forced him to drive them away from Twelfth and L Streets, and kept him in their custody for three hours.

Two policemen, dispatched in a cruiser from No. 1 Precinct to chase the taxicab, escaped injury when their car was involved in a collision at Tenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. They were Privates H. F. Mowry and W. H. Porter. Another scout car continued the chase.

Reiner said he was seated at his desk in the rear room of the loan office when on of the bandits walked in, holding a blue steel gun.

"He ordered me to walk into the front office where I saw another man pointing a gun at my assistant. I gave him all the money I had on my person which amounted to about $50. They then ordered both of us to walk to the rear of the store, which we did. One of the men asked me for a key to lock us in, but I didn't have any. They left us in the rear of the office and I could hear them going through the drawers. Finally I heard the front door slam and I ran out after them."

Reiner said he chased the two men north on Eleventh Street to an alley which runs between K and L Streets, then west in the alley until they reached Twelfth and L Streets. Reiner said he then saw them "hold up a cab" and then speed away.

His assistant, Ernest Gold, 21, 1130 Jefferson Street Northwest, said he thought the men were joking when they asked for the money.

Anderson told police the two men jumped into his cab and told him, "Step on it Bud!"

"At the same time I heard people yelling 'Hold up! Hold up!' and I got the drift of what was happening," Anderson said. He added that he never saw a gun.

Police broadcast a description of the men as follows:

No. 1. Twenty-five years old, 5 feet 9 inches, fair complexion; wearing grey suit and of slim build.

No. 2. Twenty-five years old, about 5 feet 7 inches, 140 pounds; wearing a blue serge suit, sport shirt open at the collar and a tan felt hat.

Stimson Backs Medical Aid For Britain

The belief that America "can and should" send physicians to serve overseas with the British Red Cross was expressed yesterday by Secretary of War Stimson.

His view was expressed following an appeal by the American Red Cross for 1,000 physicians for British duty, made at the request of the British and "heartily" approved by President Roosevelt. A further indorsement was given the Red Cross here yesterday by Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General, Public Health Service.

"Naturally we must look to our own interests in the light of the emergency which faces the world today," Stimson said. "We shall need several thousand more doctors in our own army. However, I feel we should do all in our power to aid in obtaining these physicians consistent with the needs of our own medical defense. . . . I am in personal sympathy with the proposal that we provide Britain with doctors. If the British need doctors—and we know that they do—I believe we can and should provide them with some of ours."

Three Months Required

From London, Dr. J. E. Gordon, American liaison officer to the British ministry of health, estimated yesterday that it would take the United States three months to meet the appeal.

American doctor volunteers would be given a lieutenant's rank with the same pay as the British and would not have to pay Britain's income tax, said Field Marshal Sir Philip Chetwode, the Associated Press reported. A British lieutenant's base pay is about $4 a day.

The volunteer doctors, at the end of the first year, would be promoted to the rank of captain, Chetwode said. They would be assigned to British units.

Dr. G. C. Anderson, a secretary of the British Medical Association, said the British civilian population would be endangered alarmingly if the appeal for American medical help went unanswered. The last war, he said, "offered no such problem."

Protected By Treaty

Secretary Stimson reminded that physicians volunteering would serve under the Red Cross Treaty of Geneva, "a convention 75 years old guaranteeing immunity of medical workers on the field of battle. Both Allied and Axis forces are signatories to this treaty. To my knowledge, the principles of this agreement never have been violated," he stated.

Parran said that during his visit to Great Britain the "acute need for more doctors repeatedly was brought to my attention. With the whole civil population in the front lines of their gallant defense effort, the assurance that medical aid is promptly available to all casualties is an important consideration in maintaining morale."

"Aside from its human aspects," he stated, "American doctors working side by side with British surgeons and physicians will acquire valuable experience in the medical techniques of modern warfare."

He said, "The needs are great, the rewards will be greater."

Rome Claims U. S. Attache Exceeded Duty

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 21.—An authoritative source declared today that the Italian government's request for recall of Capt. William C. Bentley, United States assistant military attache in Rome, was made necessary because of his activities in Italy.

At the time the request was made, April 9, it was indicated the action might have been in reprisal for an American request for withdrawal of Admiral Alberto Lais as Italian naval attache at Washington.

It was declared today, however, that the Italian government made its request not merely in reprisal but because Bentley's activities "certainly exceeded his mission and even surpassed his duties as a neutral guest of a foreign country."

Without specifying what these activities were, this source said they had been "checked up and could be checked up."

In making the announcement, the Italian source said Secretary of State Hull, in informing American newspapermen of the request that Admiral Lais be recalled to Rome, commented: "Some governments engaged today in lawless activities do not hesitate to resent the activities of representatives of foreign governments which come within the scope of the law."

This source added that the Fascist government desired to state that Admiral Lais' activities at Washington "always conformed strictly within the limits of his duties which he always discharged in a most laudable fashion."

(At the time of the request for Admiral Lais' recall, President Roosevelt said at a press conference that a great deal of the sabotage of Italian merchant ships found damaged when they were taken over in American ports was done on order of the Italian naval Attache.)

Duke of Newcastle Dies at 75; Once Owned Hope Diamond

By the Associated Press

London, April 21.—Henry Francis Hope Pelham-Clinton-Hope, the eighth Duke of Newcastle, one-time owner of the famous Hope Diamond and first husband of the actress May Yohe, died today at Surrey. He was 75.

His son, 33-year-old Earl of Lincoln, succeeds him. The earl was granted an uncontested divorce in London in October, 1939, from his American-born wife, the former Jean Banks Gimbernat, daughter of David Banks, of New York.

May Yohe, once the darling of the stage on two continents, basked in the duke's wealth but by his account she never wore the famous Hope Diamond, the omen of legendary ill luck now owned by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, of Washington, D. C.

But the actress had a name for it—"the blue stone that leaves its trail in red." She died three years ago in Boston at the age of 69, thrice-married, twice-divorced, attended in death only by a janitor and her husband, John A. Smuts, a former British army captain. She had worked last as a $16.50-a-week WPA clerk.

The Duke of Newcastle married Mary Augusta (May) Yohe in 1894. They were divorced in 1902 and the duke married Olive Muriel Thompson, daughter of a Melbourne banker, in 1904. She died in 1912.

He succeeded to his title in 1928 on the death of his brother.

Reputed to have once been the property of Marie Antonette, the 44½ carat blue white diamond was obtained in Amsterdam by Henry Thomas Hope, grandfather of the duke, for £18,000 (about $75,000).

"In my family, there never had been any tradition of ill luck about the stone," the duke once said. "We owned it for the best part of a century and never had any reason to believe in a curse. While I owned it, it was never worn at all, but remained in the bank all the time. Actually it was quite unsuitable to wear except on state occasions."

The stone was sold to a New York jeweler in 1906 and resold in 1909.

Federal Bonds Rise on Theory Of Easy Money

By the Associated Press

New York, April 21.—Buyers in the over-the-counter bond market, principal element of the trade, today bid up further numerous long-term Government loans. They acted on the theory, financial experts said, the Government's recent steps towards new taxation indicated a considerable period of easy money.

At the closeof the New York Stock exchange, in which bond trading was in the smallest volume since last February 17, long-term Government bonds in that market were ahead 6-32 to 30-32, while two short-term issues were unchanged to 2-32 lower.

The low-priced rails continued to make progress, most netting gains of ⅛ to about 1 point. Among them were the actively traded Baltimore & Ohio convertibles, of '60, up ⅝ at 25⅝; Delaware & Hudson Refunding 4s, up 1 at 51½; Erie 5s of '75, up ¼ at 22¾; Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5½ of 62a, up ¼ at 27¼; Missouri Pacific 5s of '77f, up ⅝ at 22⅞, and Southern Pacific 4½s, up ½ at 48½.

In the steels, Otis 4½s were down 4 points at 79½, after its president was quoted as having said freezing steel prices would cost the company $1,200,000 annually, against earnings of $717,000 last year. Republic 4½s were down ¼ at 103¼; Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3¼s off ¼ at 96¾, and Bethlehem Steel 3½s ahead ¼ at 105½.

Reflecting the new trade agreement with the United States, Canadian 4s gained ⅜ at 93¼, although Australian 4½s lost ¼ at 49¼. Despite the Balkan success, German and Italian bonds were off from ½ to 3 points, the extreme loss being registered by Rome 6½s at 24. German 5½s were down ½ at 10¼, while 7s were off ½ at 11⅝.

Oil Tankers Built At Record Rate

New York, April 21 (AP).—The United States is building oil tankers 257 per cent faster than the great peak achieved at the end of World War 1, a survey of shipyards orders disclosed today.

A total of 142 tankers, aggregating 1,800,000 tons deadweight, now are in process of building compared with the late 1918 peak of 700,000 tons.

Contract terms required that 25 of these new tankers come off the ways this year, but recent records set in fiyling ship contracts weeks and months ehead of time indicate more of these vessels may be delivered than anticipated.

E. P. S. Expansion To Cost $17,000,000

New York, April 21 (AP).—Engineers Public Service Co., utility holding company with widespread operating subsidiaries, plans to spend $17,000,000 in expanding its facilities this year, it announced today in the annual report to stockholders.

After pointing out that expansions cost $11,665,000 in 1939 and $11,726,000 in 1940, the report continued: "The construction program in 1941 has been enlarged in several subsidiaries, particularly in the Virginia company, by the demands of the defense program, so that the present outlook is for a construction program for the system running to $17,000,000 in 1941."

R. F. & P. Railroad Reports Dip in Net

Richmond, Va., April 21 (AP).—Stockholders of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Co., reelected today a nine-member board of directors. Norman Call, of Richmond, was reelected president.

The annual report showed increases compared with 1939 in operating revenues but larger increases in operating expenses reduced the net income below that of 1939. The net income was reported as $975,780.01, a decrease of $113,557.24.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 21 (AP).—Wheat's slow, irregular price retreat, which has been under way since the Balkan invasion began, continued today despite the market's sporadic display of rallying power.

Selling inspired by war news, weakness of securities and failure of temperatures in the Southwest to fall as low as had been expected Saturday carried quotations about a cent lower at times to 89⅛ for May and 87¾ for July, lowest since April 9 and 4 to 5 cents below the highs reached just before fighting in southeastern Europe began.

Corn closed ⅛ off to ⅛ up. May, 67⅜; July, 66⅛; Oats, ¼ lower to ⅛ higher; soybeans, ⅜ lower to ¼ higher; Rye, ⅜ to 2¾ lower, and lard 2 to 7 lower.

Washington reports said the Red Cross had asked for purchase of 150,000 barrels of flour for reserve stocks.

Oats weakened with wheat but were strengthened by improved Eastern demand. Canadian supplies at some Eastern points were reported diminishing. Rye also followed wheat, with old-crop futures sharply lower, but only on a nominal basis. Soybeans fel las much as 2 cents at times but rallied on short covering.

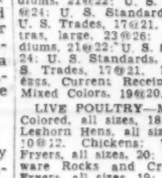
Stock List Drifts Irregularly Lower On Pessimistic War Bulletins

Editor's Note—A newspaperman and financial expert who has reported and analyzed the great economic and business changes in America since before the panic of 1907, will review each business day for the readers of The Washington Post, the significant developments in the stock market, banking and industry, beginning today.

This outstanding financial writer is Bernard S. O'Hara, a member of the financial news staff of the Associated Press, who has been writing the news of Wall Street, railroading and steel since the days of the elder Morgan, Judge Gary and Russell Sage.

New York, April 21.—The stock market again had to struggle with somewhat pessimistic war bulletins today and irregularly lower trends prevailed from the start.

Steels, motors and an assortment of industrials conceded fractions to a point or so at the worst in desultory dealings but extreme losses were shaded or canceled in many cases in the final hour. A slight opening rally failed to get far.



MR. O'HARA

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished the day down .1 of a point at 39.1, another new low since last June. It was the fourteenth consecutive session in which this composite has been up only once. Of 663 individual issues traded, 321 were off, 137 up and 205 unchanged.

The appearance of two 20,000-share blocks of Commonwealth & Southern in the forenoon, unchanged at ⅜, helped life the volume to 429,600 shares. The total compared with 485,280 last Friday.

While bearish interpretations were placed on the continued withdrawal of Allied forces in the Balkans, as well as on mounting taxes and labor unsettlement at home, a little bidding cropped up here and there during the apathetic proceedings on the theory a lot of unpleasant happenings may have been discounted to some extent.

The day's business items included a batch of earnings statements disclosing inroads made by taxes on corporation profits and a sizable drop in this week's estimated steel mill operations due mainly to shortage of coke caused by the soft coal mining deadlock.

The governmental price-fixing outlook remained as a market deterrent, brokers suggested, along with the threat of a strike at General Motors

Issues finishing under water included Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Consolidated Edison, Texas Corporation, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Philip Morris, Woolworth and Chesapeake & Ohio.

U. S. Steel erased an early minus sign and ended up ⅛.

Others moderately ahead were Youngstown Sheet, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Anaconda, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, International Nickel, Montgomery Ward, U. S. Rubber, General Electric, Standard Oil of N. J., du Pont and Johns-Manville.

Bonds and commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to off ⅝ of a cent a bushel and corn was ⅛ lower to up as much. Cotton advanced 10 to 25 cents a bale.

Electric Bond & Share preferred dropped 4¼ in the Curb. Others in arrears were Carnation, Cities Service preferred, American Gas, American Cyanamid "B" and Sherwin Williams. Among gainers were Aluminum of America, Brewster Aero, Creole Petroleum and Gulf Oil. The turnover here was around 74,000 shares versus 99,000 in the previous full session.

Attorney Attacks Court's Method In Domestic Cases

Attorney Jean M. Boardman yesterday opened a broad attack on the legality of the District Court's method of handling many family disputes by referring them to a Domestic Relations Commissioner.

Boardman is attorney for Mrs. Anna Mary Bussius, 38, 1435 East Capitol Street, who filed suit on February 28 for a separation from Clarence D. Bussius, 48, 104 Seventeenth Street Southeast. Mrs. Bussius accused her husband, an electrician at the Bureau of Engraving, of cruelty.

Domestic Relations Commissioner Philip M. Hamilton had an investigation made by Mrs. Adeline Morris, deputy clerk, and recommended that Mrs. Bussius have custody of her 10-year-old daughter, Gloria, and receive $50 monthly for five months and $75 after that until the case is settled.

Boardman asserted that the reference to the commissioner was unlawful, contending that the court had no right to confer discretionary powers upon a deputy clerk (as Hamilton is) by the device of giving him another title.

Most of Estate Of Miss Guard To Go to Schools

Miss Guard was 71 when she died April 1, six years after she retired from active teaching. Her will, drawn August 8, last year, was filed for probate in the District Court yesterday.

Miss Guard made a few small bequests and gave her personal belongings to her brother, James K. Guard, of Baltimore. Her estate of $36,431 she placed in trust, to be administered by the Washington Loan & Trust Co., the income going to her brother.

The will directed that after her brother's death, the property should be equally divided among his widow, the Mount Vernon Seminary and Mount Holyoke College. The Mount Holyoke bequest will be a memorial to Jean Dean Cole, also a cofounder of the seminary here.

Martin Decides To Do Without Paid Director

Chairman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the Republican National Committee, disclosed yesterday that he had decided to carry on in the party post without an executive director.

When he agreed to stay on as chairman last month the general understanding was that part of the bargain would be retention of a paid director to supervise office details, which would give Martin more time for his duties as House minority leader.

But Martin said yesterday he believed he could handle the job with the present staff headed by Robinson McIlvaine, of Pennsylvania, his assistant chairman.

Police, Firemen's Pay Rise Indorsed By Central Union

The Schulte bill providing wage increases for Washington police and firemen was indorsed last night by the Central Labor Union, assembly of the A. F. of L. units here.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns the play of today's hand. You are sitting South at a four-heart contract. West opens the king and queen of diamonds, which win, and then continues the ten. How do you develop the play from this point? The solution is given below.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

- ♠ Q 10 7 5 3
- ♡ None
- ◇ 8 7 6 5
- ♣ A 4 3 2

- WEST: ♠ A J 8 6 2; ♡ J 3; ◇ K Q 10; ♣ J 7 6
- EAST: ♠ K 9 4; ♡ K 6 5 4; ◇ A 9 3 2; ♣ 9 5
- SOUTH: ♠ None; ♡ A Q 10 9 8 7 2; ◇ J 4; ♣ K Q 10 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇.

Answer

Declarer makes his contract by correctly playing the trump suit so as to limit his loss in hearts to one trick. The only play to avoid two losers in trumps is to lay down the ace, after trumping the third diamond lead, and, when both opponents play low, to follow with the queen, hoping to drop the jack.

The play of the heart ace, followed by the ten or lower card, must lose even if the king drops doubleton, as in that case the jack would still remain guarded in the other opposing hand. If the adverse trumps are divided three-three the hand canot be made, as no play will prevent the opponents from taking two tricks, which with their two diamonds already won will defeat the contract.

It was just about 160 years ago that an English gentleman, name of Cornwallis, tendered his sword to a Virginia gentleman, name of George Washington, at a place called Yorktown, Virginia, to signify that England no longer was at war with the American colonies.

It might bring some consolation to Lord Cornwallis today if he knew how lasting that peace ultimately was to be. For this month, Virginia, through her garden clubs, is contributing aid and comfort in a most practical way—financially—to a troubled Britain.

The money collected from Virginia's annual Garden Club tour through its historic and beautiful estates from April 28 through May 3, which in normal times goes into a fund for restoration and perpetuation of the historic homes and gardens, this year is to go to "Bundles for Britain."

Said Mrs. John G. Hayes, in announcing the 1941 tour, the proceeds "are being sent back to England in gratitude, a gift of love in the name of our early English settlers, whose deeds and efforts have glorified Virginia."

Tonight over WJSV and the Columbia network at 10:15, Senator Harry F. Byrd, prominent publisher and former Governor, and Virginia's grand old man, is to be heard telling all about the annual tour and its purpose this year.

It's to be trusted the ghosts at historic Yorktown will be listening in.

Plane Guides 80 Soldiers From Fire-Trap

By the United Press

Fort Dix, N. J., April 21.—An unidentified airplane pilot, swooping low over a fire-ravaged woodland near Fort Dix, guided 80 men of the 156th Field Artillery to safety today from an area where they had been trapped amid flaming trees and brush.

A regimental officer said that the men, who had been assigned to battle a fire raging across thousands of acres near the fort reservation, had not realized flames had encircled them.

The pilot, circling above, sighted the men and swooped low to attract their attention.

He dived almost to the flaming tree tops and threw a weighted piece of paper to the group. On it was scribbled a message advising them that they had been trapped. The note instructed the men to stay where they were and await further advice.

The pilot then gained altitude and surveyed the situation. Then he swooped low again and tossed another note advising the soldiers that there was a small path as yet untouched by the fire.

As the men made their way through the twisting path, the pilot dropped several more instructions when they made wrong turns. Finally the men reached a zone of safety and the pilot flew away.

450 Shore Cottages Destroyed by Brush Fires

By the Associated Press

Flames roaring through the Eastern seaboard's parched woodlands destroyed 450 shoreside cottages near Boston yesterday as the devastated acreage in nine States mounted past the 100,000 mark.

For a while the naval air station at Lakehurst and the borough of Lakehurst in central New Jersey were threatened, but were saved by 500 sailors and marines and other fighters. At nightfall there were still 25 fires raging in the State.

New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and Connecticut as well were ravaged by fires which raced through brush and trees with lightning swiftness.

An 8 to 10 square mile area south of the Long Island motor parkway near the village of Brentwood burned and seven homes were destroyed. Fire fighters from several villages finally controlled the flames.

Along the oceanside in the Brant Rock section of Marshfield, Mass., near Boston, a mile and a half long 200-yard strip of summer cottages was blackened. Only a few chimneys poked from the ruins. Damage unofficially was estimated at more than $500,000.

One hundred telephone cables were burned out in the Marshfield section, disrupting communications. Timber land near three New Hampshire towns—Sullivan, Nelson and Stoddard—continued to burn.

Aerial Assault on America Is Possible, Says De Seversky

By the Associated Press

New York, April 21.—Aviation Designer Alexander P. de Seversky envisioned today military aircraft with a range of 25,000 miles and asserted an eventual air attack on America was a practical possibility.

Answering Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who in his recent "letter to Americans" asserted an attack upon the United States by a foreign power was "out of the question," Maj. de Seversky wrote in the May American Mercury:

"I contend that those who deny the practical possibility of an eventual air attack on America are lulling the American people into a false sense of safety as dangerous as the 'Maginot Line mentality' that cost France its independence.

"Col. Lindbergh, so well aware of what wishful thinking in such matters has done to European nations, should be the last one to join in the lullaby."

With the continual extension of bombers' flying range, the American continent would be as vulnerable to attack, de Seversky said, as the British Isles.

He said craft with a 25,000-mile range seemed "wholly realistic" in five years at the most.

"That will mean," he said, "that no nation and no part of any nation will be immune from direct attack from any part of the world. And long before that, the Atlantic, then the Pacific, will fall under the domination of one air power or another, in total disregard of respective naval strengths. There will be no genuine 'defense' against it except in the air. Oceans will be just so many skagerraks."

In the article, titled "Why Lindbergh Is Wrong," De Seversky, who commanded the Russian imperial pursuits in the Baltic Sea in the World War, said that he felt Britian, if given full material backing of this conntry, "has only a minor chance of not winning."

He wrote also that by building for Britain the United States was fortifying itself by developing an industrial foundation to meet its eventful air needs.

Freedom of U. S. Press Is Not in Peril, Jessc Jones Tells AP Gathering

By the Associated Press

New York, April 21.—Members of the Associated Press gathered from all parts of the Nation for their annual meeting were told by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones today that "we will never abandon the high ideal that the press should be free. . ."

Jones spoke before the editors and publishers at the annual A.P. luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, between the morning and afternoon business sessions of the cooperative newsgathering organization.

"Some are concerned about freedom of the press," he said. "When they contemplate the disasters which have befallen the press in some other countries, the more pessimistic are afraid that the same fate might be in store for them here. I have no such fear."

Jones, who is a member of the Associated Press as publisher of the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle, and also is Federal Loan Administrator, suggested that his invitation to speak "came because today is Texas' birthday, the 105th anniversary of the Battle of San Jacinto, where Houston won independence for Texas."

Thanks Assemblage

Jones said that if there ever should be censorship of the American press, and I don't think there will be, it will be brought on by those shortsighted few who blindly and stubbornly refuse to recognize the responsibility that inevitably goes with freedom."

"But as a Government official I am glad to be able to say that I have never seen any indication that anyone in Government wanted to do any censoring, unless it be information which might aid those who are not America's friends," he added. "Freedom of the press is a vital part of the heritage of every free-born son of this democracy. It is a vital fundamental of our way of life. It is through the press, the dailies, the weeklies, and the magazines that America speaks."

Discussing progress of the defense program, Jones warned that sacrifices were necessary, but added that he was "afraid that as a people we have not yet realized the imperativeness of our defense necessities, that we have not yet been shocked.

No Room for Smugness

"There is no room in America today for complacency," he said. "There is no place for indifference. Certainly there is no place for obstruction and it should not be tolerated . . . There is no place in the crucial world of 1941 for any delay or excuses."

Applause greeted his statement that Gen. George Marshall, chief of staff, "told me only two days ago, after visiting camps and cantonments throughout the country, that we have a million and a quarter as fine men in training as he has ever seen, and that he had never seen better morale."

Jones said that "the time is rapidly approaching when each of us will be called upon to measure our patriotism, our love of freedom, and our devotion to the democratic way of life in terms of individual sacrifice."

Lauds Foreign Correspondents

Associated Press members lauded the courage, devotion to duty and the newspapering of Associated Press men serving abroad and voted to send them a message of appreciation.

The board of directors reported that the Associated Press was serving directly or through its subsidiaries, 2,012 newspapers throughout the world, including 1,264 in continental United States.

The meeting also elected six directors to three-year terms and members of the auditing and nominating committees.

Reelected members of the board of directors were Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin; Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star; Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun; E. H. Butler, Buffffalo News, and Josh L. Horne, Rocky Mount (N. C.) Telegram. George F. Booth, of the Worcester, Mass., Telegram, was elected a new director.
